Thieu Flies to Hue To Halt Retreat

Times News Services

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu today flew to the threatened city of Hue for urgent talks with his military commanders on the situation in the North. He smiled and expressed confidence despite the shattering defeats in Quang Tri, 32 miles to the north.

Hue itself was returning from the near-anarchy of Wednesday to a semblance of normality. South Vietnamese troops who had fled southward from Hue along Highway 1 streamed back today on orders of their new commander, Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, who directed they return to Hue or be shot on the spot.

President Thieu, in a move to maintain civil order in South Vietnamese cities and towns during the North Vietnamese offensive, ordered police to "shoot on the spot" anyone engaging in terrorism or public disturbances.

The battlefields were relatively quiet today although Communist forces have moved in on Hue and were reported 18 miles northwest of the old Anamite capital, six miles to the west and 10 miles to the southwest. The major threat was from the northwest where they had tanks and new hand-launched anti-aircraft missiles.

USAF SECRET MAPS WRAP FURNITURE

LONDON (AP) — The British defence ministry ordered an investigation Wednesday to determine how secret United States Air Force maps came to be used as wrapping paper by a London furniture company.

A defence ministry spokesman said the maps came here from Germany but he had no idea how.

They were first discovered and brought to the attention of British authorities by a Birmingham customer of the London company.

There are still more inquiries to be made in Germany, from where they would appear to have come, the spokesman said. "They are stamped 'Restricted, USAF. For official use only,'" he added.

Anti-Drug Ads 'A Big Laugh'

By ROBERT OLVER

Times Staff

(Fourth of Six)

The government of British Columbia is wasting at least 75 per cent of the money it earmarks to combat drug abuse.

This is an accusation that has been made by many individuals intimately concerned with illegal narcotics.

Perhaps most importantly, that accusation has been made by the junkies themselves; by young people on the fringes of the drug scene and hard-core addicts alike.

And it has been made by others. It has been made by people in what we might call the establishment—the establishment aimed at finding a solution to the scourge of drug abuse.

In one way or another, the accusation has been made by each of the three people—perhaps the only three people—who really know about addicts in Victoria and are passionately dedicated to doing something about the problem.

Those people are Dr. Jack Patterson, director of the Dauphin Society, which is currently working on the rehabilitation of 88 addicts in Victoria; Dr. James Laing, director of NARC (Narcotic Addiction Rehabilitation Centre) and Staff Sgt. William Chisholm, of the Saanich Police Department.

The accusation has also been made by police undercover agents, the narcs, who will have to remain nameless for reasons explained earlier in the series.

The legal drive against drug abuse in B.C. comes from the proceeds—that means the interest—on a $23,000,000 fund. The proceeds amount to about $1.75 million yearly. Seventy-five per cent of that amount is spent on television, radio and newspaper ads.

Don't Distort Trade, Says U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP)

—The U.S. treasury department issued a formal caution today that it expects "normal trade patterns" will not be distorted by Canada's negotiations with foreign investors under proposed new Canadian legislation to screen business takeovers. (More Gray report stories on Page 45.)

The brief anonymous statement distributed by the treasury press office said the U.S. government "appreciates the legitimate interest of the Canadian government in the activities of all industries, foreign and domestic, in Canada."

"At the same time, we would hope and expect that any Canadian negotiations with foreign investors would not produce results which would have the effect of distorting normal trade patterns."

It was the first substantial official comment from U.S. government sources since Revenue Minister Herb Gray tabled his report and proposed legislation in the Commons Tuesday.

Most government departments here had declined any official comment earlier, although numerous officials discussed the legislation on a personal or unattributed basis.

Treasury's publicly voiced concern appeared to be the same as that put forward privately by several government officials Wednesday—that Canada would use its new legislation to seek unusual advantages in export promotion.

WANTS BENEFITS

The proposed legislation establishes that a foreign take-over of a Canadian business will not be approved unless it promises "significant benefit" to Canada. The bill provides for negotiations between a foreign firm and the Canadian department of industry, trade and commerce to agree on terms which would assure sufficient benefits to the Canadian economy.

Although the bill itself does not specifically mention export promotion as an area in which the foreign firm could make proposals that would gain approval for the take-over, this was supplied to U.S. government offices by the Canadian embassy here.

The reference particularly caught the eye of treasury officials who have been pressing for measures to reduce the current U.S. deficit in trade with Canada.

"People should continue to press for land which they can use," he said. "The bulk of the population is situated in the lower mainland and on Vancouver Island."

He added that creation of parks in the north, should have been done long ago as logging and mining companies have been active in the area for some time.

RATS TRIM STUDENTS

TORONTO (CP) — Teachers at a Roman Catholic school in midtown Toronto have complained of "nausea" from the stench of rotting garbage and some parents have withdrawn their children from classes, vice-principal Mike McGinnis said today.

He said mounds of garbage accumulating across the street from St. Raymond Roman Catholic school during a strike by the city's 4,000 outside workers is causing "definite discomfort," and attendance at the 1,200-student school is dropping as the garbage piles up.

May Michaud, mother of three children, said parents of about 100 students, frightened by rats and annoyed by the smell, have withdrawn their children from classes.

She said some residents carry baseball bats to club the rodents.

McGinnis said in an interview it is difficult to estimate how many students are absent because of the rotting garbage.</

'Not My Mission to Knock Bennett Off' - Anderson

By CLEMENT CHAPPLÉ
Times Staff

There was nothing to suggest that David Anderson is likely to alter his political style to suit B.C. politics as he discussed for the first time Wednesday his sudden switch from the federal to the provincial arena.

He said that "British Columbians has to be brought into the 1970s... I don't think we can continue to run it on what I think is a 1950s attitude."

If or when he succeeds Liberal leader Pat McGeer and becomes an MLA, he will have a tough job.

"It is extremely difficult being the third party in the house," he admitted Wednesday.

He said that the Alaska pipeline has been stopped for more than two years and opposition to it in the U.S. Senate is still growing.

"Who would have thought we could do it?" he asks.

"I don't see it as my mission to knock Bennett off. It's to do something more constructive," he said.

For a number of reasons Anderson doesn't see his move to B.C. as a permanent or disruptive departure from the federal Liberals with whom he has had his battles.

Prime Minister Trudeau, he said, told him he'd be disappointed if he left Ottawa.

"He has never objected to my style," Anderson said. His ministers did the objecting and unfortunately Trudeau tended to go along with them.

Trudeau "could understand it (the move to B.C.) because he had done the same thing."

Anderson said he wasn't trying to draw a complete parallel but he pointed out that after beginning a career in Ottawa in the Privy Council Office, Trudeau left for participation in the provincial scene in journalism and law.

"It's not as if I am fed up with what went on there" in Ottawa, he said.

He thought he had improved the image of the ordinary MP and "done a pretty useful job but I just don't feel at this stage I can do as much good as I can here."

His analysis of Premier Bennett's performance: "A man of 72 (years) isn't a man for the seventies... I just think he is unaware of modern 1970s concerns."

Bennett's attitude on federal-provincial affairs is "just passe." The ordinary citizen "knows full well it's expensive to have federal-provincial battles."

On labor relations: "I really think the premier is quite happy" to have dissent between labor and management.

But Anderson doesn't expect this to mean he can suddenly defeat Bennett: "All this is not to say the fellow is about to collapse of his own weight."

He is aware of some of the commonest criticisms heard of the B.C. Liberals: "The tendency up-country is that that's the Vancouver crowd."

A fundamental problem is to overcome the communication gap between the party and the boondocks, he said.

Anderson sees the B.C. Progressive Conservative Party as little more than a willing child of Social Credit.

"If (PC leader) Derrill Warren thinks he's going to step out of line one minute... he's going to get his backside kicked so fast to the other side of the stream..."

He expects the Conservatives to get about five or six per cent of the vote, judging by their present popularity but a PC vote "really is a wasted vote."

The Tories are "just there to filter off the Liberal vote."

Anderson expects to pull more weight in Ottawa than recent B.C. Liberal leaders have done, because he has supporters as well as detractors in the federal party.

He said he has not decided which riding he will contest but it will be in the Victoria area. He thinks he can win Saanich or Esquimalt ridings.

He is not expecting any big corporate support in the next B.C. election. "It's going to be a people's campaign."

Although it appears that Anderson will get a good welcome from the B.C. Liberals

president, Mel Couvelier, have promised support — he has to be chosen leader and also win a seat in the B.C.

He said he has not decided which riding he will contest but it will be in the Victoria area. He thinks he can win Saanich or Esquimalt ridings. But the dual riding of Victoria, if another Liberal were also elected, would provide a better home constituency, for a leader.

BEDS, MONEY 'MISUSED' SCOTT WALLACE CHARGES

Money wasted on expensive hospital care of patients who don't need it ranks as a scandalous abuse in public spending, Oak Bay MLA George Scott Wallace said Wednesday.

In a speech to the Fraser Valley branch of the B.C. Hospitals Association at Abbotsford, he said:

"Not only is this shocking misuse of public funds, but many seriously ill patients wait for admission to hospital and may suffer permanent deterioration of their condition simply because beds are occupied by non-seriously ill patients who have no other facility to which they can be transferred."

LEVELS OF CARE

Wallace, a general practitioner in Oak Bay, left the Social Credit party last summer and now sits in the legislature as a Conservative. As a doctor he was continually critical of the government's health care policies.

The basic answer to waste in hospital operations lies in levels of care, he said.

"This means that many different types and intensities of care must be provided, appropriate to the different intensity of need of the patient.

"In other words, patients should receive the amount of care they need, in an appropriate type of facility, no more and no less."

CHEAPER TO BUILD

Three or four days after their operation many patients no longer need the sophisticated and expensive care which goes with an acute bed in a hospital.

They are not yet well enough to go home but could be adequately and much more cheaply provided for in a facility like Royal Jubilee Hospital's Bay Pavilion, he said.

There they look after many of their own needs such as collecting their meals cafeteria-style and returning their dishes to the kitchen.

Such wards are cheaper to build and staff and when labor costs form most of a hospital's operating budget, the impact of such steps is obvious.

GLARING ABUSE

Wallace said the other glaring abuse of acute beds in hospitals arises with so-called extended-care patients. They require continual but a lesser intensity of care but there are not enough suitable places for them.

"I would submit that in most areas, and certainly this applies to the Greater Victoria area, until all the required extended-care beds are built, no one can realistically and accurately state how many new acute beds are required."

Patients who require neither acute nor extended care but some type of intermediate care such as found in nursing homes also frequently take up acute-care beds, he said.

HEIGHT OF HYPOCRISY

There may be a financial factor in such cases because patients in an acute bed pay only a dollar a day under the provincial hospital insurance plan. In a nursing home they would have to pay the entire cost.

DOG FUR MERCHANT TO EXPORT KILLING

PRETORIA, South Africa (Reuters) — Van de Sandt de Villiere Smit, who caused an uproar recently by his plans to make fur coats out of dog pelts, said today he is considering exporting dogs for slaughter to avoid proposed legislation.

The government has promised legislation banning the slaughter of dogs for commercial purposes.

"If the government does pass the legislation, then I will simply do as I have promised — kill the dogs outside South Africa, and then bring the skins back," Smit said.

There is still opposition to the plan, however. He said a Pretoria businessman had offered him $12,000 to drop the scheme.

"But I will go on," he said.

The Hot Potato

The British Columbia Supreme Court has upheld the validity of legislation designed to prevent the origination of alcohol and tobacco advertising within the province. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson applauded the decision but one detected a note of uncertainty in his voice. Life might have been much simpler for him if it had gone the other way.

The big problem is that cussed tobacco advertising. He may cajole B.C. publishers and billboard operators into abstention but what about those publications printed outside the province which are still tainted with glossy cigarette displays? If they come in how can he justify the restraints on B.C. publishers? If only the federal government had persevered last year with its proposed ban on tobacco advertising! Then B.C. could have boasted of jumping in first and left the task of enforcement to Ottawa.

No wonder the Attorney-General's language was convoluted when he commented Monday on the Supreme Court judgment. He said: "There is no reason why there should be any delay in enforcement of the legislation" — but he did not explain how it would be enforced. He also made a public appeal to all newspapers and magazines publishing in the province that we likewise expect them to adhere to the legislation. It did not sound as though he felt on very firm ground.

The judgment has not removed Mr. Peterson's dilemma. How is he going to enforce the Tobacco Advertising Restraint Act without discriminating unfairly against B.C. publications? Indeed, how is he going to enforce the Act?

An Injection of New Blood

The choice of David Anderson to be leader of the British Columbia Liberals could open a whole new vista for the party in this province. If elected by the party convention later this month he could bring a fresh approach to B.C. politics, a driving energy which has been amply demonstrated in the federal field, and a hope that, with the Social Credit government approaching the end of an era, a revived Liberal Party could fill the governmental vacuum that will be left.

Dr. McGeer has given the best of his effort and time to the leadership of the party, and continuing courage in the very difficult task of directing a tiny legislative group in providing meaningful opposition to the government. But he has been unable to strike the spark that would lift the party from the doldrums into which it subsided 20 years ago after the collapse of the Liberal-Conservative coalition administration. A new leader, fresh from a short but energetic and somewhat spectacular career as a Member of Parliament, and with a reputation for hard digging and self-confidence, might be able to bring a new spirit to the party.

Apart from whatever personal contribution he could make to provincial Liberal affairs, Mr. Anderson as leader might have the ability to lure into public life some of the able Liberal candidate material of the province — men and women who have been loath to try for election to a Legislature in which they would be doomed to little more than voicing protests against the solid Social Credit majority. If Mr. Anderson could inspire hopes that he would be able to lead the Party to something more appetizing and significant, he might well bring a new political complexion to the provincial scene.

His selection as leader at the Penticton convention May 20 should be a foregone conclusion, now that he has revealed his willingness to take the job, and he should have little difficulty in finding a constituency in which to run. Naturally, there is going to be no overnight revolution. But it could be the beginning of a new game — with a new deck.

One Metropolitan Fire Department

The day after the city council, in budget session, cut out the fire department's request for 21 extra men, its members received the annual report of Chief Simmons saying more manpower is needed because the existing force can "efficiently combat only one major fire at a time."

Without the extra men the city is dependent on the "inefficient call-back system, or the inefficiencies of the current mutual aid agreement with Saanich and Oak Bay fire departments", the chief reported.

The arrangement, in existence for years, by which each of the three municipal forces provides stand-by service for any one of them whose equipment is committed to a major outbreak, is apparently not good enough in the opinion of the Victoria chief.

In view of Chief Simmons' comment, now would be a good time to re-examine the arguments for unification of all forces into a metropolitan unit, with each municipality paying its share toward the maintenance of an integrated department.

Such an amalgamation has been opposed on numerous occasions with the explanation that the co-operative stand-by system was a highly practical way of meeting emergencies. Now Victoria's fire chief says if has "inefficiencies". An up-to-date study of the issue is due. The economics of fire protection demands one.

The Fundamental Questions

WASHINGTON — The President has now defined his Vietnam policy more precisely than ever before. His policy is not only to get the American troops and prisoners out of there, but to defeat the Communist invasion, and "to prevent the imposition of a Communist regime on the people of South Vietnam against their will . . ."

In short, Mr. Nixon will not leave the outcome to a test of arms between the North Vietnamese, backed by Moscow and Peking, and the South Vietnamese, backed by far more arms from the United States, with a South Vietnamese army of over a million men, a South Vietnamese air force of over 1,000 planes and over 500 helicopter gunships, and total control of the air.

"We will not be defeated," Nixon said, "and we will never surrender our friends to Communist aggression." Well, "never" is a long time, especially in an election year, but Nixon sees the defeat of the enemy invasion and Communist aggression not only as a military issue between the two Vietnams, but as a moral issue for America which involves the honor of his nation and maybe even the peace of the world, and nobody can say this is not policy.

Stand Defined

In fact, Nixon has now said, in effect: This is where I stand, and if you want to change the policy, you will have to change the President. This is fair enough, and not a bad offer, but November is a long way off at the present rate of killing, and meanwhile somebody has to find a way out of this trap and try to change the question.

Presumably this is one important reason why Henry Kissinger was sent to Moscow. He was trying to find out whether Nixon couldn't get a little help from the Soviet Union, which is supplying the modern arms to Hanoi, to bring this war in Vietnam to an end, so that the major powers could get down to the really important world questions of controlling arms, avoiding war in the Middle East, establishing a security system in Europe, reorganizing the trade and monetary systems of the world, and easbut they still seem to be trapped in the psychology of the cold war even more than Nixon.

Even with the help of Dobrynin, their Ambassador in Washington, the Soviet leaders don't seem to know what has happened in Washington. There was a time when President Nixon, on the urging of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, thought about getting out of the Vietnam war with American bases at Kam Ranh Bay and Danang, which would maintain western power in the Pacific after the Japanese had regained Okinawa, the British had pulled out of Singapore, and the Chinese had taken over Taiwan and come

Moscow Less Flexible

The President is being pressed now by his opponents for the presidency to make more concessions, and to put the unification of his country ahead of his support of Saigon, and with good reason, but Moscow, as one of the two great power centres of the world, also has its responsibilities, and so far, it has been even less flexible than the President.

The immediate problem is fairly clear. It is to end the killing and the diversion of Vietnam and get on to the really important questions of controlling military arms, population, and poverty. What Nixon has done in his last speech is merely to state the old questions, and dramatize the old confrontation. But he is trying, after his fashion, to get on to the larger questions, and he has asked the Soviet leaders: When are you going to help? When are Washington and Moscow going to get down to the questions that unite the world instead of secondary questions like Vietnam, that divide the great powers? The Nixon visit to Moscow this month may very well give us an answer to these fundamental questions.

"... first the GOOD news... McGeer has quit..."

PAUL WHITELAW

Lifting the Movie Bans

MONTREAL — It's little more than a decade since Quebec censors banned a film on the life of theologian Martin Luther because of the bad effects they felt it could have on Roman Catholic movie goers.

At that time Quebec's cinema censorship policy was among the strictest in North America and such decisions were common. If films weren't banned outright, the plots were made frequently unintelligible by the censors' scissors.

However, all that has changed in recent years — most noticeably since 1967 — and Quebec's movie censorship policy is now regarded by many to be the most avant garde in Canada.

The man who heads the Cinema Supervisory Board, Andre Guerin, says the evolution merely reflects the wider changes that have taken place in Quebec in the wake of the "Quiet Revolution" of the early 1960's.

"We consider our policies in the large the manifestation of legislative and popular will," he noted in a recent interview.

Liberalization

"The board's work would not have consensus if there had not been a corresponding liberalization in the attitude of Quebec movie goers to what they are prepared to see."

Indeed, the religious groups which might seemingly want Quebec's censors to return to the old ways have been surprisingly silent, an indication of just how much the province's social fabric has been altered in recent years. The main challenge to the Cinema Supervisory Board's work has come from municipal police forces in Montreal and Quebec city which are responsible for enforcing federal obscenity laws.

The cinema board, set up by the Quebec National Assembly in 1967, is under provincial jurisdiction. It has the authority to classify or ban any film destined for public exhibition in the province.

However, the law governing obscenity is contained in Article 152 of the Criminal Code, which is a federal matter.

Luther's life was censored

A Woman is viewed by Mr. Guerin as a vindication of his group's work.

The movie had been approved by the Cinema Supervisory Board for showing to adult audiences in 1968, but police raided the Montreal theatre where it was being shown and confiscated the film.

A Montreal court ruled recently that the show "did not overstep in July 1968 the threshold of decency and tolerance in the Canadian community."

"Furthermore," noted the presiding judge, "according to the proof and to my own observations, there has been an evolution of tolerance on the part of the community . . ."

Although Mr. Guerin is happy with the court decision regarding "I, A Woman," he regrets that the Cinema Supervisory Board's authority over film affairs was not upheld.

"We had hoped the court would pay more attention than it did to the Quebec Cinema Act (passed in 1967)," he said.

The liberalization of Quebec's cinema policies has accelerated since 1967 with the setting up of the new board. That's likely because the emphasis of its role was switched from censorship to classification.

Ironically, the flow of "exploitation" films which have since become the staple of movie fare at many Quebec theatres may be responsible for the development of higher cinematic standards among movie goers.

Want Choice

"An interesting switch that we've noticed recently," noted Mr. Guerin, "is that the same people who demanded to see sex depicted realistically in Quebec films are now demanding films treating other subjects as well. They want a choice of films, sex films perhaps, but also costume dramas, political pictures, thrillers and especially comedies."

"I hope our influence in all this has been a positive one."

Mr. Guerin also believes that the most dramatic changes in Quebec censorship policy are yet to come.

He foresees that the classical debate over greater or lesser censorship will be overtaken in a few years by serious consideration of whether there should be any censorship at all.

"As you know," he stated, "the U.S. Federal Commission on Obscenity and Pornography recently recommended the repeal of all laws prohibiting the distribution of pornography. In Denmark pornography has been legal for several years and Sweden, Germany, Holland and England are moving in a similar direction. Well, people in Quebec have begun to ask, 'Why not here?'"

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Political Level?

I have noted with interest the discussions between Victoria School Board 61, and Dr. Whitbread, of the Metropolitan Board of Health.

Evidently no septic tank system is to be allowed at the View Royal Elementary School, and sewers are the only thing, in the area, so that developers may be given a free hand. It is hoped that the residents of View Royal are aware of this fact. — Patricia Massy, 533 View Royal Ave.

I wonder why this same department allowed Lochside School on Royal Oak Avenue, and the Royal Oak Junior Secondary School on West Saanich Road, to install new septic tank systems this year, without publicity, comment, or demand for sanitary sewers, although their conditions are similar to that of View Royal Elementary.

One can only conclude that in the case of View Royal, the school is being used as a political lever to install sewers in the area, so that developers may be given a free hand. It is hoped that the residents of View Royal are aware of this fact. — Patricia Massy, 533 View Royal Ave.

Ronning's Canada-China Story

Lothbridge Herald

It will be interesting to read Chester A. Ronning's forthcoming book in which the former Canadian chargé d'affaires to China relates that it had not been for the Korean War, Canada would have recognized the People's Republic of China 20 years earlier.

Dr. Ronning, who was born and raised in China and speaks the language, recalled in a recent interview with The Herald that he recommended the recognition of Peking the day the People's Republic was founded Oct. 1, 1949.

"On June 25, 1950, the day I received instruction to finalize the exchange of diplomatic relations, the Korean War broke out," he said. As a result of Canada's participation in the UN forces, mainly due to Washington's pressure, the China recognition was delayed.

Only a handful knew of Ottawa's intention to recognize Peking a generation ago, and an extreme few realized that Canada asserted pressure on the United States to sign the Korean armistice.

NEW YORK — Thomas A. Edison, it was learned today, has accomplished the greatest triumph of his career. He has perfected a method of separating paying elements of ore that will mean hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in the productive wealth of the country.

The inventor is not at this time prepared to give out details of his new method, but it is learned a plant that required $250,000 a year to operate can be carried on by the new Edison method for $50,000.

Canada and the Colonels: A Squalid Liaison

A Greek restaurant in Soho — ouzo flowing, bouzouki fill the room not with any such paltry thing as sound but with an immensity of noise, shards of crockery ricochet from walls. When Simon, the impresario of this agreeable ambience, sits down at our table, I tell him my home town is where the leader of the Panhellenic Liberation Movement is presently in exile, that I've been privileged to talk with Andreas Papandreou.

Simon's features at once compose themselves in an impassive mask.

"Are you pro-junta or anti-junta?" I ask him.

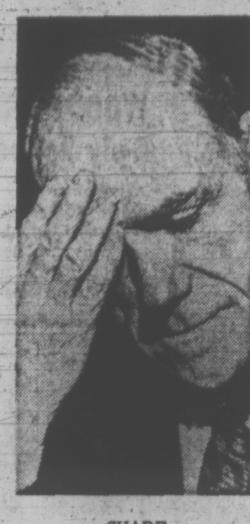

"I am neither pro-junta nor anti-junta. I am in business, not in politics."

Clearly Simon is pro-junta. The revelry seems tawdry now, the evening's gone sour, I pay the bill and leave.

More frank than my Soho restauranteur is the government of Canada, which is entering its sixth year of alliance with the dictatorship in Greece. For so squalid a liaison, our minister of external affairs, offers this justification: "Greece should remain in the alliance so that we and other members may maintain our lines of communication with the Greek government. This is the only way I can see for us all to work for the restoration of freedom and democracy in that country..."

That was in May, 1970. At the end of 1971, Mitchell

Sharp as much as admitted that the intervening twenty months of communication with the Greek government had done little if anything to restore freedom and democracy. Reporting to Parliament on December 13 at his talk with the acting foreign minister of Greece, Mr. Sharp declared: "I urged upon him the need for the Greek government, if it sets store by the opinion of others, to act in accordance with its words. Elections, I suggested, would go far in this direction."

Does Mr. Sharp really believe such a suggestion is worth the breath it took to make it, let alone the labor to print it in Hansard? Surely he must realize that the regime of the colonels has no more chance of surviving a free election than he would have campaigning as a separatist in his Eglington riding.

Papadopoulos and his junta have kept themselves in power by terror and intimidation. They have been indicted by the Council of Europe for using torture as a political instrument. To ask them to seek from the people of Greece a verdict on their vile and sadistic deeds is to ask them to quit their government offices and line up before a firing squad.

Execution by a vengeful public was the fate of an earlier oligarch, Antiphon, whom the Athenians put to death during the fifth century B.C. It is not fanciful to suppose that the Greek colonels are mindful of this precedent, so aptly does Thucydides' account of his regime apply to their own.

Antiphon's oligarchy was in fact more broadly based than Papadopoulos's. The former had an electorate of 5,000, whereas the so-called mini-parliament created by the colonels in November, 1970, was chosen by an electorate of 1,240. What Thucydides wrote of the constitution drafted by the 5,000 applies as well to the assembly elected by the 1,240: "Only a piece of propaganda designed for the general public."

The mood of that general public Thucydides describes in terms that are strikingly apposite today: "The people kept quiet, and were in such a state of terror that they thought themselves lucky to be unmolested even if they had said nothing at all. They imagined that the ruling party was bigger than it actually was, and they lost all confidence in themselves. People approached one another with suspicion, everyone thinking that the next man had something to do with what was going on."

Both oligarchies employed front men—"people," as Thucydides put it, "whom no one would ever have imagined could have joined in an oligarchy." Antiphon used Peisander, Papadopoulos used Panayotis Pipinelis, who served the colonels as foreign minister until his death in July, 1970.

Both oligarchies resorted to exile and execution of those who, in Thucydides' words once more, "were inconvenient... If anyone did oppose, at once he was a dead man.

And no search was made for those who had eliminated him, nor any action taken against those who were suspected of the deed."

History may not repeat itself. But it rhymes.

In one crucial respect, however, Antiphon's and Papadopoulos's oligarchies are different. Antiphon's was self-sustaining while it lasted. Papadopoulos's is sustained by the United States.

Greek opponents of the colonels are convinced that, deprived of American support, they could not endure a day. That is why Greek opponents of the colonels consistently seek the help of people in other NATO countries to use what influence they have to expel Greece from the alliance.

The latest in a dispiriting library of books exposing the inequities of the Papadopoulos regime—Inside the Colonels' Greece, the work of neither a foreign journalist nor an exile but of a Greek intellectual still living in his native land and therefore writing both clandestinely and pseudonymously—urges European members of NATO to bring pressure on the United States to change its policy toward the United States.

"It is up to the European members of the Alliance," "Athenian" asserts, "who after all have a say in the matter, to reject the sophistry according to which the defence of read our stated policy, 'Athenian' despairs of changing it? "We will be doing a greater service to the people of Greece by keeping Greece in the alliance rather than by expelling it." Certainly these words of Mitchell Sharp might have been drafted in Papadopoulos's foreign ministry rather than our own, so perfectly do they suit the Greek colonels' perverted cause.

Or is it because our prolonged acquiescence in the grisly aspects of U.S. realpolitik has led even a sophisticated European observer to doubt that we possess any independence worth cultivating?

It is hard to know which of these two explanations is the more depressing. The most likely explanation—that it's a combination of the two—is the most depressing of all.

Our policy towards the Greek colonels' squalid oligarchy has been tried for five full years and found wanting. It is not good for Greece, it is not good for NATO, it is not good for the United States, it is not good for Canada.

It is no policy for a government which aspires to create a just society—"the kind of society," as Pierre Trudeau defines it, "freedom would establish." A just society requires a just foreign policy, and a just foreign policy requires more care than we have shown to avoid the company of tyrants.

in his own interests to do so, for we've seen in recent months the indignation triggered in Kitchener after a deal between a developer and the council to which the public was not privy.

Publishers, Too

There are only two justifications for elected officials meeting in secrecy, one being a discussion of the merit of certain individuals in which private issues may be raised; the other has to do with the purchase of land, where in some cases it may be in the public interest to keep the discussion private to prevent speculation.

But with Eaton's it is considerably different. They are dealing, through a developer, with our elected officials, for the purchase of public streets and the creation of a complex so massive it will change the style of midtown Toronto and influence the entire life of the city for a century. It's a public matter of major consequence.

Mr. Lamport is wrong to favor closed meetings and it is to the credit of the developer that he has the common sense to reject the notion. It is decisions about the city made in the muffled voices of private talk? More and more people say no. Yet opening such rooms to the microphones and cameras is not a small decision. For a group of men meeting privately may decide one thing; the same group meeting publicly, another. And it may well make such meetings less efficient and that, in the end, is probably what worries Allan Lamport. But efficiency is not the highest of our values.

The Tax Services: Can You Trust Them?

THE TORONTO STAR

As income tax return forms become more and more complicated, increasing numbers of Canadians are having to seek help in filling them out. As a result, a number of private businesses, including some department stores, are starting to offer tax services.

What assurance does the average citizen have that the information about his income and his expenditures that he reveals to the person helping him fill out his tax return, and which may eventually be stored in some computer's memory bank, won't find its way to the credit records of the department store, or to some other credit files, as well as to the department of national revenue?

None, it seems, but the good faith and goodwill of the company with which he's dealing.

The Income Tax Act provides that tax information is confidential and that no one outside the revenue department shall have access to it.

but the provision clearly applies only once the information has reached the department.

Taxpayers who go for help with their tax returns to firms of accountants and lawyers are protected by the professional bodies' codes of ethics.

which has a Canadian subsidiary was found to have provided the names, addresses, occupations and incomes of some customers to companies selling mutual funds and life insurance. The U.S. now prohibits such disclosure: the penalty is a $1,000 fine and a year's imprisonment.

Canada does not yet have such prohibitions; the Canadian who uses the tax service of a private business has only that business' word that the information will be kept confidential. It's not enough.

THE BIGGEST SELLING SMALL CAR IN EUROPE VS. THE BIGGEST SELLING SMALL CAR IN AMERICA

This year, millions of Americans and Canadians will go out to buy their very first small car.

Many will find themselves confused as to which small car is best.

Which is why we think it might be helpful for you to know that in Europe, where they've been comparing small cars for three generations, they buy more Fiats than anything else.

Volkswagen included.

One of the big reasons for this is the Fiat 128, which we're bringing to North America for the first time this year.

OUR PERFORMANCE VERSUS THEIR PERFORMANCE.

The most obvious difference between the Fiat 128 and the Volkswagen Super Beetle is the engine.

Ours is in front—theirs is in back. We have front wheel drive—they have rear wheel drive.

Front wheel drive gives you better handling because the wheels that are moving the car are also the wheels that are turning the car.

Front wheel drive also gives you better traction on ice and snow. (As proof last year, the Fiat 128 won the Canadian Winter Rally, which is run over ice and snow the likes of which we hardly ever see on Vancouver Island.)

You'll also notice, if you glance at the chart on the right, that under passing conditions the Fiat accelerates faster than the Volkswagen. (If you've ever passed a giant truck on a highway, you know how important that is.)

The Fiat 128—which has self-adjusting front disc brakes—can bring you to a complete stop in a shorter distance than the Volkswagen, which does not have disc brakes.

The Fiat 128 has rack and pinion steering, which is a more positive kind of steering system generally found on such cars as Ferraris, Porsches and Jaguars. The Volkswagen doesn't.

And lastly the Fiat comes with radial tires; the Volkswagen doesn't.

OUR ROOM VERSUS THEIR ROOM.

The trouble with most of the small cars around is that while they help solve the serious problem of space on the road, they create a serious problem of space inside the car.

And while the Volkswagen is far from the worst offender in this area, it still doesn't give you anywhere near the amount of space you get in the Fiat 128.

As you can see on the measurement chart, the Fiat 128 is a full 10 inches shorter on the outside than the Volkswagen. Yet it has more room on the inside than an Oldsmobile Cutlass, let alone the Volkswagen.

Compared to the Super Beetle, it's wider in front, wider in back, and 5 inches wider between the front and back seat. Which should be good news for your knees.

And in the trunk of the Fiat 128, where lack of room is taken for granted in small cars, you'll find 13 cubic feet of room. In the Volkswagen, you'll find 9.2.

OUR COST VERSUS THEIR COST.

Aside from the fact that the Fiat 128 costs $255 less than the Super Beetle, there's another cost advantage we're rather proud of.

According to tests run by the North American Testing Company, the Fiat 128 gets better gas mileage than the Super Beetle.

Now we don't for one minute expect that, even in the face of all the aforementioned evidence, you will rush out and buy a Fiat. All we suggest is that you take the time to look at a Fiat.

Recently, the president of Volkswagen of America was quoted as saying that 42% of all the people who buy Volkswagens have never even looked at another kind of car.

And we think that people who don't look before they buy never know what they've missed.

The Headache Syndrome

description precisely, and, not surprisingly, headache here has reached the status of a national institution.

Aspirin advertising has probably had something to do with this. If you have time to watch large volumes of television, as most Americans do, it probably means that your mind is suffering from a lack of material to think about. Vacuums yearn to be filled; the aspirin industry was there, hunkered down inside the tube, for years, working hard to satisfy the yearning. Thus, headache took up a position in the forefront of the American consciousness.

Gradually, those of us who have a headache only once a year or less, or maybe never, began to feel that we were different from most Americans. That we were somehow inferior. The Americans we watched on TV had heads that were ready to ache at the drop of a dime-store saucer. Their dear old mother's offer to wash the dishes or sew the button on dad's vest could start their heads throbbing.

At least we supposed their heads throbbed. The diagrams of headaches in action leaned heavily on cartoon sketches of hammers pounding against skull interiors in ways that made the whole cartoon skull pulsate. Watching those hammers pound, we could not help reflecting that here was something that went on inside the typical American skull that did not, alas, go on inside our skulls. We felt cheated. In a strange way, we had been left out of a basic American experience.

Never for us could there be those paroxysms of pleasure — the ecstatic pleasure of relief from pain — which the sponsor's aspirin gave lucky sufferers on our TV sets. So swiftly it came, that blessed relief! Twice as fast, very often, and the lucky persons to whom headaches came in battalions with practically no provocation at all looked so happy and improved by the experience!

No wonder persons whose heads could ache beyond the capacity of the average man's began to boast about their headaches. These headache snobs were quickly put to work by the Excedrin company at boasting about the incredible intensity with which their particular heads were able to ache: The only pill that could give them relief, naturally, was Excedrin. The Excedrin headache was born. It was the badge of splendor among aching heads.

One was tempted to dismiss much of this as the usual TV fakery. And yet, in one's own house there was evidence, in a growing collection of aspirin jars, that there were genuine living Americans, Americans whom one knew intimately, whose heads did truly ache. These genuine living Americans began to boast about their own headaches.

PAY RECOVERED Former Mental Patients Find Project Centre

Action by B.C. labor department investigators resulted in $788,000 being paid by employers to employees during 1971 compared with $712,000 in 1970.

The largest amount recovered for employees was under the Payment of Wages Act — $621,729 in 1971 compared with $487,835 the previous year.

Infractions under the Payment of Wages Act involved 2,690 employers and 5,549 employees, the annual report of the labor department shows.

Organizers of a centre to help former mental patients find their way back into community life have found a site for their project.

To be called Creative Initiatives, it will be located in a two-storey building on Queens near Cook which has room for at least 10 tenants and a store front area for art activity.

Opportunity for all forms of creative art is a key concept in the project, partly financed by a $10,075 opportunities for youth grant.

The building was offered to organizers Don Braun and Ken Chernoff at a rental of $400 a month after a Times story Saturday outlined the project and told of their frustration trying to find a site.

Former psychiatric patients will rent rooms at the centre to meet the building rental. The grant covers staff salaries.

Chernoff and Braun said, they are grateful to several others who offered quarters after reading the story.

Anyone able to help can call 383-0116 after 4 p.m.

They also hope for money donations to buy art materials. The project will be registered as a non-profit society, said Braun.

Chernoff said two psychiatrists, two psychologists and two psychiatric nurses have volunteered to help with the centre.

Six organizers, including Braun and Chernoff, were originally involved in the project. The other four are now planning on establishing a second centre and the grant will be divided between the two, Braun said.

Injunction Ends Some Lockouts Firms Must Explain Mortgage Fine Print

The B.C. Supreme Court granted an injunction in Vancouver today to end a lockout by Construction Labor Relations Association against employees at 31 companies. They are among some 840 contractors in the current lockout.

PENDING

Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere ruled that a section of the Labor Relations Act came into force preventing the lockout because the Plumbers Union has applied for certification as bargaining agent for the employees at the firms and the application was still pending.

Action against three other companies was dismissed.

The association claimed that the union applied for certification to escape the lockout.

Meanwhile, the plumbers argued that 200 men would be put out of work and the union would suffer damage through loss of membership and bargaining strength if it was not granted.

NOT OPTIMISTIC

Meanwhile, a union spokesman said in Victoria he is "not optimistic" the construction industry lockout will be a short one.

Both sides seem dug in solidly, John Schibli, secretary of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council, told Victoria Labor Council delegates Wednesday night. The council pledged its support to building unions.

He said one of the central issues is not wages or hours of work, but CLRA proposals which would result in "dilution of the present agreement."

Two key issues for his own union, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, were the subcontractor clause where contractors want to stop the union dispatching men to sites where no agreement is in effect and additional words which would negate the right of union workers to refuse to work alongside non-union unions, he said.

LONG STOPPAGE

A CLRA lockout two years ago lasted three months. The association has said the current lockout is 100 per cent effective but unions have disagreed and in Victoria, Schibli said he knows of half a dozen CLRA contractors who haven't locked out.

"They are operating under their own name. Others are transferring payroll to another name," he said. He declined to identify the companies.

The Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters has signed contracts with seven independent (non-CLRA) contractors providing for a 50 cents an hour raise from April 1 on the old rate of $6.14 an hour.

Schibli said another half dozen companies have agreed to the same interim agreement, but on a verbal basis.

He said the union has committed itself to these companies not to identify them, but said close to 100 carpenters are at work at these places.

On Vancouver Island, Local 230 of the IBEW has signed identical settlements at eight contractors employing 50 men. Business agent Jim McEvoy also said that as of Monday, union electricians will be removed from independent contractors and CLRA companies still operating which do not sign the same interim agreement before them.

Meanwhile, Schibli has sent a telegram to Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Robert Andras about rumors the cement industry may try to assist CLRA companies.

The telegram said: "Information current that key plants in cement industry intend closure supporting construction lockout as in 1970. Request close scrutiny by your department. Many contractors can continue operations dependent on cement supply."

Detailed disclosure of the "fine print" of mortgage transactions in B.C. will be required as of Sept. 1, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson told the mortgage industry today.

Power can hope to receive or have applied on his account and also itemization of the various charges such as bonus, legal fees, survey costs, discount, etc.

The statement will also contain the terms of the mortgage and an indication of how much of the principle will still be owing at maturity.

"It will also contain an indication of whether there is a penalty for early payment out."

A separate requirement will allow the borrower to back out of the mortgage up to 48 hours from the time he either signs the mortgage or receives the disclosure statement, Peterson said.

Legislation outlining the new move was passed at the last session of the B.C. legislature.

The disclosure statement will set out "in as simple terms as possible the more significant terms of the mortgage including in particular the proceeds which the bor-

Turkey On Alert

ANKARA (UPI) — The Turkish armed forces were placed on emergency alert today, a few hours after an attempted assassination of the commander of the national police, Turkish authorities said tonight.

Still at large following the April 8 escape are Randolph Bruce Johanson, 33, and James Howard Smith, 22. Police blame the men for a rash of boat and gasoline thefts along the island since then.

A government source said it was the first time such action had been taken by the Turkish military commanders since the Cyprus crisis of 1964 when Turkey and Greece almost went to war over the island.

MD Fee Proposal Under Wraps

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black said today the B.C. medical profession has the government's fee schedule proposal, but he won't reveal the contents.

The proposal was delivered by hand Wednesday to the B.C. Medical Association by Geoff Stewart, chairman of the Medical Services Commission, and will be explained formally at a meeting Friday, Black said.

"I have to bargain in good faith — I'm not going to bargain through the media."

Asked if he thinks the doctors might find the government's proposal hard to accept, Black said that "they are naturally going to question this and that item."

He also refused to say whether this was the government's final offer.

In Vancouver, Dr. E. C. McCoy, executive director of the BCMA, confirmed today the association had the proposal.

There will be no comment until after the board of directors has considered it at a meeting Friday.

The 3,300 doctors in the province represented by the BCMA have been trying for 16 months to negotiate an increase in fees paid them under medicare.

They began using a new fee schedule, on average 8.2 per cent higher, Jan. 1 but the government has ignored the move and continued to pay fees at the former rate, which is 90 per cent of the doctors' old fee schedule.

More recently the BCMA trimmed the new schedule to increases averaging about 6% per cent.

On Vancouver Island, Local 230 of the IBEW has signed identical settlements at eight contractors employing 50 men. Business agent Jim McEvoy also said that as of Monday, union electricians will be removed from independent contractors and CLRA companies still operating which do not sign the same interim agreement before them.

Meanwhile, Schibli has sent a telegram to Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Robert Andras about rumors the cement industry may try to assist CLRA companies.

The telegram said: "Information current that key plants in cement industry intend closure supporting construction lockout as in 1970. Request close scrutiny by your department. Many contractors can continue operations dependent on cement supply."

Legislation outlining the new move was passed at the last session of the B.C. legislature.

The disclosure statement will set out "in as simple terms as possible the more significant terms of the mortgage including in particular the proceeds which the borrower can hope to receive or have applied on his account and also itemization of the various charges such as bonus, legal fees, survey costs, discount, etc."

The statement will also contain the terms of the mortgage and an indication of how much of the principle will still be owing at maturity.

"It will also contain an indication of whether there is a penalty for early payment out."

A separate requirement will allow the borrower to back out of the mortgage up to 48 hours from the time he either signs the mortgage or receives the disclosure statement, Peterson said.

Saanich Neglected Drainage – Farmer

A victim of last winter's flooding in Saanich lowlands is seeking a meeting with the mayor in an effort to prevent or reduce future losses.

Bill Mattick, who has farmed in Saanich for 40 years, claimed to have legal and moral backing for his contention that Saanich neglected proper drainage maintenance in Blenkinsop Valley, notwithstanding an opinion from the municipality's solicitor that Saanich was not responsible for flooding.

The farmer said he would not take the issue as far as a legal action, but he wants assurance from Saanich that funds would be made available for future drainage maintenance.

NOT CLEARED

His land at Blenkinsop, which he planted in partnership with another farmer, contains drainage easements which the municipality has not cleared for three years, Mattick said.

"We cleaned them on our property, but we couldn't go into the neighbor's or municipal property," he said.

He also spent $2,500 on ditching two years ago.

Mattick contended that Saanich is entitled to drain water to low-lying land, but "they should make provision to pass it through."

He said he has legal opinion to back him up.

Because of flooding, Mattick lost part of a celery crop, 500 crates valued at $1,500 to Mattick or $3,000 at the consumer level.

SMALL CROP

Because the local crop was small, merchants brought in California celery at a retail price of $9.50 for the 500 crates, Mattick said.

"It's my municipality

I've been farming it for 40 years. I'm trying to make a living out of it and I have enough trouble growing crops with droughts and heavy rain without runoff water from subdivisions."

Mattick said drainage into Blenkinsop Valley carries water from nearby subdivisions which because of construction and paving are no longer able to absorb surface moisture.

$10,000 LOST

There was one crop from the Blenkinsop land instead of two, meaning that Mattick's farm gang worked only three months instead of six.

Mattick was among some 15 persons who registered their protest over flooding at a recent meeting of public works committee. They referred to the Blenkinsop, Rithet bog and Douglas Golfland areas which are situated on the Colquitz River drainage system, and to Oldfield Road area, north of Elk Lake.

Councilor D. A. M. Patterson told Saanich it had no responsibility for the flooding in any of the cases.

Acting municipal engineer John Cowlin said there were no claims for compensation, but that the residents wanted improvements in the drainage system.

Golfland operator Laurie Carroll said his business was closed four days due to flooding, the whole range becoming covered with water that backed up from Colquitz near Glenford. Ditches leading to the river had not been cleared for five years, he said, which he felt was unfair considering his taxes are nearly $4,000 a year.

His pro shop was flooded, equipment damaged and his financial loss was estimated at $1,000 to $1,500.

If you'd like to become a smarter car buyer—send for this free book.

We listen.

We know you think car buying is a complicated process whether it's North American or an import. For that reason Ford Motor Company has written a book of over 100 pages called "Car Buying Made Easier."

Please note: we said "easier" — not easy. But the book can help. If you're planning to buy a new car, chances are you'll need it. Best of all, it's free.

Because we listen better, we think it's time you had more information to help you make the right car buying decision. If you agree, stay with us. The next few minutes may prove helpful.

THE BOOK NEEDED WRITING. IS IT BIASED BECAUSE FORD WROTE IT?

To a degree—yes.

As Ford Motor Company, we must confess a certain preference for our own products.

But to minimize the problem, we purposely divided the book into two sections. The first section of the book deals with cars in general, and the information it contains can be applied to Chevrolets, Plymouths and Cadillacs, as well as Lincolns, Mercurys, Fords, Cortinas and Capris. It's as factual and informative as we could make it.

SECTION I

How to buy the right car even if it isn't one of ours.

How to buy only as much engine as you really need. (The range includes everything from 98 cu. in. "fours" to 460-plus cu. in. V-8s.)

What you should know about axle ratios. (The right one can improve gas mileage by as much as 25%.)

How to decide on the right options. (Air conditioning can add a significant amount to the value of your car when you go to trade.)

And so it goes, page after informative page. You'll even find a convenient quiz after several chapters. There's also a personal check list to take with you when buying a new car.

SECTION II

Ford Motor Company cars.

Part I of "Car Buying Made Easier" is devoted to helping you determine the right car for you. It discusses everything from how to buy the right size and type of car, to how to select the right options. There are even chapters on insurance and financing. It covers subjects like these:

• Compacts vs. subcompacts—what are the real differences?

product information about our 1972 North American built and imported cars sold in Canada.

Here are just a few examples:

• All, full- and intermediate-sized 1972 Fords and Mercurys carry a special energy-absorbing frame that is designed to reduce the shock of a head-on collision.

• Most "automatic"-equipped Ford Motor Company cars feature improved transmission cooling.

• Power disc brakes are now available on most Ford Motor Company cars.

Do write for the book. While you're at it, let us know what's on your mind. Tell us how we can better serve you as a company.

We listen. And we listen better.

... has a better idea

Century Sales

Century Sales and Controls Ltd. of Vancouver has purchased Western Canada Agency, a heating wholesaler in Victoria operated for the past 15 years by Walter Grenke.

Dave Brousson, president of Century Sales and Controls, says the two Victoria branches of Western Canada Agency will be consolidated into one new building which is in the planning stage.

Imasco

First quarter earnings of Imasco Ltd. shows an increase of 10 per cent over the same period in 1971. Consol-ated net earnings are $4,075,000, equal to 41 cents a share, an increase of $368,000 or four cents a share.

A large part of the increase in sales for the quarter is owing to the inclusion for the first time of the vending machine operations of AMCO Services.

Acquitaine

Earnings of Acquitaine Co. of Canada Ltd. increased to $5,254,000 or 25.5 cents a share for the first quarter of 1972 compared with $4,954,000 or 24 cents a share the corresponding period.

Gross revenues were $9.1 million, up from $6.9 million for the first three months of 1971.

Included in the unaudited figures were sales and operating costs of the Ram River natural gas processing plant, 100 miles northwest of Calgary, during the start-up period which began in February.

During the corresponding period last year, the company earned $111,473 or 11 cents a share. Gross revenues were $1,203,970 from $745,717.

Robinson, Little

Shareholders of Robinson, Little and Co. Ltd. of Winnipeg have approved a 10-for-1 split of both common and Class A shares.

Robinson, Little operates a chain of company-owned and franchise stores in Western Canada, specializing in soft goods.

American Motors

American Motors Corp. reports a strong recovery with profits of $12.96 million in the first half of its fiscal year, the best in seven years.

Last year, AMC profits were $1.1 million in the six months ending March 31 after suffering a second-quarter loss.

AMC's first-half sales were $665.2 million, up from $614 million last year.

Last week, General Motors and Ford reported record first-quarter profits of $651 million and $252 million respectively.

Earlier, Chrysler Corp. reported a $35.8 million profit for the first three months of the year.

AMC's first-half profit was equivalent to 49 cents a share, compared with four cents last year.

Sales in the second quarter were $334.3 million, up from $285.3 million last year. Profits were $6.3 million, or 23 cents a share, up from a loss of $4.8 million, or 19 cents a share the preceding year.

Placer

Placer Development Ltd. reports former world metal markets and a resumption of growth in the mining industry.

Markets for copper concentrate, particularly in Japan, became less secure in 1971 and the result may be a redistribution in world trade. Concentrate sales will probably be made in the future to a wider group of countries than at present, the annual meeting of the Vancouver-based company was told.

Placer earned $3,718,000 or 62 cents a share in the first quarter of this year compared with $871,000 or 15 cents in the first quarter last year. Total 1971 earnings were $4,032,000 or 67 cents a share.

Yablonski Death Financed

By Union, Court Told

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UPI) — A United Mine Workers research and information fund partly established by union president W. A. "Tony" Boyle actually was a murder fund which provided $15,000 to pay the killers of UMW insurgent Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski, according to a prosecutor.

Special prosecutor Richard A. Sprague said Wednesday that the fund was created at a secret meeting attended by Boyle and Albert Pass, secretary-treasurer of UMW District 18 in Tennessee and Kentucky.

NOT DEFENDANT

Pass is one of seven persons charged with the Dec. 31, 1969, slaying of Yablonski, his wife and daughter. Boyle, who was re-elected as UMW president over Yablonski three weeks before the slaying, is not a defendant.

Three persons have pleaded guilty to the Yablonski murders and two others were convicted and sentenced to death. Pass, who will be arraigned here Friday, and another UMW District 18 official, William Prater, are awaiting trial.

Sprague's disclosure came shortly after Silous Huddleston, 63, president of a small UMW local in Lafollette, Tenn., pleaded guilty to the murders.

In a 22-page confession read by an FBI agent in Washington county court, Huddleston said Pass and Prater gave him $15,000 to pay Yablonski's assassins.

"I never asked Bill Prater or Albert Pass how they raised the money for the murder," Huddleston said in his confession. "I believe, however, that the miners who received checks from Bill Prater for the research and information fund kicked back all the money to Prater."

Sprague said checks from the fund were given to aged pensioners, ostensibly for organizing activities. The pensioners then returned the money to Prater, he said.

Sprague said the fund was subsidized by $20,000 transferred in 1969 from the UMW national treasury.

Asked if he would describe it as a murder fund, Sprague said, "I believe so, yes."

There is not enough evidence "at this time" to arrest Boyle, but, "I expect that this case will not end with Pass," Sprague said.

Huddleston said that Pass asked him in the spring of 1969 to find some people to "take care of Yablonski fast," but later ordered the slaying delayed 30 days until after the election.

Four Firms Follow Shell

REGINA (CP) — Four more companies have followed the lead of Shell Canada Ltd. in taking out oil exploration permits for northern Saskatchewan lands.

The area under exploration now amounts to 2.8 million acres which, said a mineral resources department official, would include almost all of northwestern Saskatchewan's oil shale area.

Shell has taken out permits on 1.7 million acres north of the Cold Lake air weapons range.

Shell now has expanded that acreage to 2,063 million acres and four other companies have taken out permits on 747,680 acres in the same area.

FALLERS' DISPUTE TOP ITEM

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks on a new contract between the forest industry and the International Woodworkers of America were scheduled to resume today in Vancouver.

Provincial mediator Clark Gilmour was to meet with both sides, with first priority the two-week walkout of coast forest industry fallers.

IWA president Jack Moore said Wednesday night the industry had requested the fallers' dispute be put at the top of the agenda in the hopes of settling the walkout which began April 17.

Robert Bonner, MacMillan Bloedel president, confirmed the meetings and said the fallers' dispute would be "the topic of the day."

High-level union-management talks aimed at ending the walkout broke off two days ago.

Bonner said it would be "useless" to continue talks until the union "regains control of the fallers."

Moore said Bonner is entitled to his opinion. He denied the union had lost control of the fallers.

Moore said today's negotiations on the main contract would centre on initial proposals of both union and management. He said it was unlikely the industry would make a wage offer at the meeting.

The IWA, bargaining for 28,000 coast woodworkers, wants a $1-an-hour increase, plus fringe benefit improvements.

The calls were made in response to an article in a teen-age magazine advertising a number at which people can hear recordings of their favorite stars.

Unfortunately, the girl got the number from a friend and not the magazine and didn't realize the number was in Los Angeles nor that it offered only recorded messages from various stars scheduled for different days.

But finally after 19 attempts she managed to hear her favorite, Donny and the Osmonds, a few times.

A spokesman from Bell Canada said they had several calls from angry parents warning an explanation of the Los Angeles calls listed on their bills and "all we can suggest to parents is that they check with their kids."

Shooting Case to Jury

The attempted murder trial of a Port Alberni man charged with shooting his friend in Colwood last December went to the jury this afternoon after jurors were given lengthy instruction by Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson.

Joseph McKenna, 43, is charged with attempting to kill Lawrence John Walsh, 20, of 410 Kingston. He pleaded not guilty at the outset of the B.C. Supreme Court trial Monday.

Court was told Walsh was hit in the neck by a slug from a 12-gauge shotgun in an incident about 3 p.m. Dec. 2 at a railway camp near the Victoria Plywood plant on the Hill Road.

In testimony given Wednesday, five RCMP officers gave their versions of the dramatic incidents that led to McKenna's arrest following the shooting.

Called to the scene, four of them were directed to a sleeping car up the track.

Corporal W. S. Hacock of Vancouver, who was visiting the Colwood detachment at the time, said he looked in and saw Walsh lying on a bunk and bleeding badly from the neck and left shoulder.

Hacock, who was unarmed, then saw McKenna holding what appeared to be a rifle.

Then "Staff Sergeant Smith shouted at me to run. 'He's got a gun.'"

As the four of them scattered for cover at either end of the sleeping car, Hacock last saw Walsh starting to rise off the bunk and head towards the man with the gun.

Hacock said he then heard a brief struggle inside the boxcar, and then Walsh fell out of the doorway and onto the ground, after which he and Smith pulled him to safety to one end of the boxcar.

Staff Sgt. Lloyd Smith, who is in charge of the Colwood detachment, testified that after he and Hacock had laid Walsh down across one track, McKenna refused pleas from the officers to throw out his gun.

Smith, who had his service revolver trained on McKenna everytime he appeared at the doorway, said he then carried about a 10-minute conversation with the accused.

Smith said McKenna was saying: "I don't want to get you. I want to get that bastard. I won't come out until I kill the bastard. I have no quarrel with the police. If you want me you will have to shoot me. That bastard has ruined more good people."

At one point, said Smith, McKenna swung out from the door, shotgun in hand, and yelled to police "go ahead and shoot me."

Later testimony revealed that a fifth RCMP officer, who arrived after the other four, was crouching behind a police car and pointing a rifle at McKenna.

Smith asked McKenna what would your mother think?" and the accused replied "I got no one."

"Someone must care?" Smith said.

"No one," said McKenna, who to the police appeared inebriated.

Hacock, who had climbed to the top of the sleeping car and had been looking down at McKenna during this conversation, came back down after he had failed to pay a board loose from the roof.

He said he then noticed McKenna had put down the shotgun, so he ran to the doorway and unsuccessfully tried to pull McKenna out by the legs as the accused tried to reach for the shotgun.

Smith, who had his service revolver trained on McKenna everytime he appeared at the doorway, said he then carried about a 10-minute conversation with the accused.

NANAIMO — Saanich E. J. Hunter exploded for eight unanswered goals in the third period Wednesday to trample Nanaimo 18-9 in a B.C. Junior "B" Lacrosse League encounter.

Kevin Alexander led the rout with 12 goals and three assists. Dan Green (2), Rob Moses, Mike Wilson, Bob Cool and Jim McCrae scored the other Saanich goals.

Bill Robinson was outstanding in the Saanich net, blanking Nanaimo during the third frame. Nanaimo led 5-4 after the first period but had dropped behind 10-9 by the end of the second.

It was the second consecutive victory for the Saanich crew, which downed East Vancouver 15-8 in the opener at the weekend.

Bates Switch Pilots

Victoria Bates will have a new coach when they open their 1972 Northwest International Fastball League campaign this weekend in Tacoma. Mr. Jeff D. (K. Smith) will concentrate full-time duties as a pitcher.

The new playing-coach is Joe Patterson. He replaces Barry Jackson who will concentrate full-time duties as a pitcher.

Jackson requested the change because of work commitments.

Sponsor Herb Bate made the announcement at a news conference Wednesday night.

It was also announced that Ken Larson, a pitcher from Nanaimo had been dropped from the roster.

Ten holdovers and seven newcomers were named to the 17-man squad:

Holdovers from last season's team were George

Banks (third base, outfield),

Bob Boudot (second base),
Harvey Stevenson (outfield),
Bill James (catcher), Bob

Lifetime Driving Ban?

NANAIMO (CP) — A judge recommended Wednesday that a commercial fisherman not be allowed to drive again in his lifetime unless it is proven he is emotionally stable to handle a motor vehicle.

In fining Douglas Alex Cassie, 29, a total of $1,150 and barring him from driving for two years, Judge Eric Winch said he would make the recommendation to Ray Haffield, superintendent of motor vehicles.

The judge also ordered Cassie to undertake psychiatric treatment. Cassie had pleaded guilty to charges of criminal negligence in driving from Nanaimo to Parksville the next day and $150 for a hit-and-run incident the same day.

He was fined $500 for dangerous driving at Parksville April 9, $500 for criminal negligence in driving from Nanaimo to Parksville the next day and $150 for a hit-and-run incident the same day.

When Judge Winch directed Cassie to pay the fines at $200 a month, E. D. Strongitharm, counsel for Cassie, remarked: "It's a lot of salmon." In default, Cassie was ordered to serve 114 days in jail.

Winch said 25 citizens became so enraged with Cassie's driving that they each telephoned RCMP.

He reportedly caused $2,000 damage by travelling between two vehicles, smashing the side mirror of an oncoming truck and causing several side-swipe collisions.

Acting Head for FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dampening the potential fire-works of an election-year debate over the FBI, President Nixon has chosen only a temporary replacement for the late J. Edgar Hoover who ran the agency for 48 years.

Nixon appointed L. Patrick Gray III, an assistant attorney-general, as acting FBI director Wednesday and said no permanent appointment will be submitted to the Senate until after the Nov. 7 election.

In following this course, Nixon avoids a replay of the still-smoldering fire over his last major appointment, that of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney-general.

Gray will not have to be confirmed by the Senate as acting director as would any candidate Nixon named for the job on a permanent basis.

DELAYS FINAL CHOICE

Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said Nixon will not nominate a permanent FBI chief until after the election because "he doesn't want it (the choice of a successor) considered in the middle of an election year" and perhaps become the subject of partisan debate.

Last Feb. 15, Nixon elevated Kleindienst from deputy attorney-general to the top justice department position and moved Gray up to the No. 2 job.

Neither nomination has been acted upon by the Senate, and Nixon now has withdrawn Gray's appointment so he may hold down both the FBI helm and his present job as head of the department's civil-rights division at the lower salary of the latter, $33,000.

The Kleindienst nomination became embroiled in debate at Senate judiciary committee hearings investigating allegations of Justice department improprieties in the settlement of anti-trust suits against International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

Gray, 55, a career navy officer until he retired in 1960 to practice law and politics, has been a Nixon friend for a decade. He served eight years as a special assistant to Nixon when he was vice-president.

Kiernan Says Avenues Closed

To Further Tanker Protests

acting head

Provincial government officials expressed no alarm at the release of a report prepared for the federal government saying that British Columbia's new Pacific Rim National Park is in a particularly bad position for tanker oil spills.

The report says that the park is in a potential high-risk area if supertankers carrying Alaskan crude oil begin plying the route from Valdez, Alaska, to refineries at Cherry Point, Washington.

Recreation Minister Ken

Kiernan said he doubts any purpose would be served by additional protests over the proposed oil tanker route.

"I don't think we can dictate to another country on the use of international waters," Kiernan said in an interview.

NATIONAL POLICY

"But I think more can be done in international agreements or a national policy for better surveillance and a better quality of personnel on vessels moving up and down the coast."

Dr. Howard McDiarmid, Social Credit MLA for Alberni, the constituency in which the park lies, said he also could not see a purpose in making further representations to the U.S.

"Every step that could be taken has already been taken," he said.

"They know the park is there, but to them it is such a minor consideration."

Disagreeing with the government spokesman was Ken Farquharson, president of the B.C. Sierra Club, a conservation group.

"We have to make every pie we can," Farquharson said. He suggested that the government should publicly support the report and urge construction of a pipeline as an alternative to the tanker route.

Flood Damages Sought Against Cariboo Mill

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Six Cariboo residents have claimed damages and an injunction against a pulp firm for allegedly interfering with the level of a lake causing flooding to their farms.

The Prince George residents claim the defendant, Northwood Pulp Ltd., wrongfully and negligently constructed a dam on Hay Creek at the outlet of Eaglet Lake impeding the flow of water into the creek.

The writ says the creek rose and flooded their land and deposited logs, bushes and debris they say the defendants allowed to be deposited in the lake.

Inmate Guilty

MATSQUI (CP) — James Floyd Steeves, 29, an inmate of the Matsqui medium security institution, pleaded guilty Wednesday to charges of possession of heroin and methadone. Steeves was charged in February after drugs were found in the prison. He was remanded to May 11.

Hearing Adjourned

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Preliminary hearing of two 27-year-old U.S. citizens, and a B.C. resident charged in connection with police seizure of 402 pounds of hashish, has been adjourned until June 26. Robert R. Burns of Venus Cali., William R. Fairchild of Hawaii, and Joseph A. Donnelly of North Vancouver, are charged with possession of the drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Accept Pact

KELowna (CP) — The 146 members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees in Kelowna will get a 7½ per cent pay increase in each year of a new two-year contract. The CUPE membership voted to accept the new agreement.

'Real' Decline Shown In Union Membership

Trade unions grew 2.1 per cent in membership in British Columbia last year.

However, union membership as a percentage of the total number of paid workers declined to 42.3 per cent from 43 per cent.

This, the annual report of the labor department says, indicates a "real" decline in union membership — a drop in the number of potential members of unions who actually were members.

The report said factors responsible were the "low" 2.1 per cent growth rate in total union membership and the large increase in the number of paid workers.

There were 316,587 members of 120 unions in 1,035 locals in 1971, an increase of 6,365 persons, while the labor force grew to 748,000 from 722,000, up 26,000.

The labor department report said the "real" decline in union membership was a continuation of a trend prevalent in the 1960s but interrupted in 1970.

Jews 'Gagged' for Nixon Trip

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jewish activists are being drafted into the Soviet army to clean the streets of Moscow for President Richard Nixon's visit, a Russian scientist told Vancouver Jews by telephone from Moscow.

Vladimir Stepan said that by ordering a dozen leading activists to report for pre-induction medicals, Soviet authorities are hoping to avoid demonstrations during Nixon's visit.

KATMANDU, Nepal — An Austrian has climbed the world's eighth tallest mountain over a previously unconquered route but lost two colleagues after the conquest, the expedition leader reported Wednesday.

Wolfgang Nairz, 28, said Reinhold Messner reached the 26,752 foot summit of Mount Manaslu on April 25. The two other climbers were lost on the same day and presumably were buried under six feet of snow, Nairz said. The missing climbers were Andy Schlick, 28, and Franz Jager, 29.

DENVER — A Trans World Airlines flight took off from Boston with 31 passengers aboard and landed a few hours later in Denver with 32.

A spokesman for TWA said a baby boy was born to Mrs. Maria Edwards da Silveira Correa somewhere between Omaha and Denver. A doctor, who was among the 31 passengers on the flight, aided in the delivery. The woman was travelling with her husband and six small children.

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Evangelist Billy Graham will be presented with the Sylvanus Thayer Award by the U.S. Military Academy's Association of Graduates.

The honor, named for West Point's first commandant, is given annually to a person "whose service and accomplishments in the national interest exemplify outstanding devotion to the ideals expressed in the military academy motto, 'Duty, Honor, Country,'" a spokesman said.

Birchers See Red Plots In Canada

TORONTO (CP) — The John Birch Society is convinced there is a Communist conspiracy in Canada, says its public relations director.

Rex Westerfield of Belmont, Mass., visiting Toronto to explain why the society has appointed its first full-time coordinator in Canada, said the move was a "response to an existing growth pattern."

As evidence of growing Communist influence, he cited the Front de Liberation du Quebec "war emergency," which he said was Communist-inspired because it allowed Prime Minister Trudeau to create a dictatorship. In addition, he said, Mr. Trudeau was socializing medicine.

Mr. Westerfield said the society had received inquiries after it printed an article by freelance writer Alan Stang which noted the presence of drugs and "wavy Ho Chi Minh beards" at Rosedale College and the decision by "Premier 'Red Mike' Pearson" to admit draft dodgers and deserters from the United States.

He said the society will not engage in direct political activity in Canada but expects its members to express their opposition to the United Nations or Canadian wheat sales to China "as individuals."

"Education is our only strategy; truth is our only weapon."

NIXON LOAN QUERIED

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A legal grounds, including a suit was filed Wednesday to charge that the book interferes with the right to free elections and the truth in packaging law, challenging the authenticity of the documents on which it is founded.

"This is obviously a put-up thing by one of Hughes' many tentacles," said the author, Nicholas North-Broome, a British journalist.

Schaub, who said he was not connected with any of the parties in the suit nor any political group, refused to comment.

"The suit speaks for itself, I don't want to say any more," said Schaub, who identified himself as a "freelance legal researcher."

The suit, described by legal sources as "a very sophisticated and professionally prepared document" was prepared by himself, Schaub said. He is not a lawyer, Schaub said.

North-Broome and his publisher said they would fight the suit, and defend the authenticity of the book in court if need be.

Australian Describes Asian Power Struggle

The working out of the power equation in Asia will be one of the greatest issues in the 1970s, says David Williamson McNicol, Australian high commissioner to Canada.

Speaking at a meeting of the Vancouver Island branch of the Royal Commonwealth Society Tuesday night, McNicol said: "Asia is an area where the Soviet Union, China and the United States have important strategic and other interests."

"Stability and progress in Asia are likely to hinge mainly on how relations evolve between the countries which have the most weight in the area."

McNicol said Australia had entered a new era after the Second World War, particularly in respect with her relationships with Asian countries.

He said Australia had found herself faced with increased military commitments, a demand for accelerated industrial growth, with one of the major requirements being a vigorous immigration program.

Since 1945, McNicol said, Australia's population has increased by about 2.5 million. More than 25 per cent of the population is now engaged in the manufacturing industry.

McNicol reported Australia now ranks eighth among countries engaged in the automobile manufacturing industry and her mineral production has jumped 400 per cent in value.

McNicol gave examples of Australia's increasing involvement with Asian countries:

About 11,000 private Asian students study in Australia each year.

More than 13,000 foreign students, mostly Asian, attend Australian schools, technical colleges and universities.

Before the war, Australians' grand tour was traditionally Britain. Now increasing numbers go to Singapore, Bangkok, Hong Kong and Tokyo.

Gabriola Ferry

A new 22-car B.C. ferry, one of three being built at Vancouver Shipyards Ltd. at a cost of $1.5 million, will go into service on the Gabriola Island run in early July.

A provincial department of highways spokesman said Wednesday the new ferry will replace the 13-car Mv. Westwood, which will then be diverted to the Hornby Island run.

As in past years, the Mv. Rolf Bruhn will continue to be used as a back-up vessel during peak periods in the summer months.

The other two ferries under construction are slated for the Denman and Thetis Islands runs, estimated completion dates being late July and August.

They will replace the smaller Mv. Catherine Graham and Mv. Ethel Hunter.

Export Trade Up Slightly

OTTAWA (UPI) — Statistics Canada reports that export trade rose slightly for the first quarter of this year but exports to Japan and the United Kingdom declined.

The value of domestic exports increased to $1,501.5 million in March, 1972, from $1,498.0 million a year earlier. January to March exports increased to $4,276.4 million from $3,875.4 million in January, 1971.

Exports to the United States and The Netherlands increased but recorded a decline with all other countries.

Drug Proposal

REGINA (CP) — Health Minister Walter Smishek promised Tuesday the government will set up a program administered by a special agency to reduce the price of pharmaceutical drugs.

Smishek, in a speech in the legislature highly critical of the drug industry, supported a resolution by John Richards (NDP — Saskatoon University) calling for establishment of such an agency.

40% of LIP to Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 40 per cent of the $2,377 short-term jobs created by the federal government's Local Initiatives Program were in Quebec.

Figures released Wednesday by the manpower department show 38,473 jobs, at a cost of $63,669,941, were created in the province since the $150 million winter works program was announced last October.

L.I.P. was part of the government's $578 million reaction to rising unemployment.

Projects could be submitted for funding by private groups or municipalities with the major requirement that they provide a minimum 30 man-months of work and be of a non-profit nature. Later the requirement was reduced to 15 man-months.

Each of the jobs created by the 5,700 approved projects cost the government an average $1,000.

RESPONSE WAS HEAVY

By the Jan. 31 closing date, 13,736 proposals were received which would have cost the government $480,683,000 if all were approved.

The final program cost was $132,404,262. Of that total, $96,300,553 was used to finance private projects.

Jobs created and grant totals by province:

Newfoundland — 7,415 jobs; private $6,587,539; municipal $3,340,578.

Nova Scotia — 6,878 jobs;

private $7,291,107; municipal $3,143,171.

P.E.I. — 1,300 jobs; private $1,525,988; municipal $522,705.

New Brunswick — 5,770 jobs; private $6,283,772; municipal $2,944,833.

Quebec — 38,473 jobs; private $39,000,659; municipal $24,869,282.

Ontario — 14,931 jobs; private $15,322,344; municipal $8,355,503.

Manitoba — 3,084 jobs; private $3,575,837; municipal $1,962,096.

Saskatchewan — 2,182 jobs; private $2,648,767; municipal $1,611,198.

Alberta — 4,895 jobs; private $4,303,539; municipal $3,820,199.

British Columbia — 7,190 jobs; private $5,810,060; municipal $5,165,011.

Northwest Territories — 529 jobs; private $625,617; municipal $452,473.

Yukon Territory — 250 jobs; private $315,116; municipal $118,356.

Meanwhile, Manpower Minister Bryce Mackay said Wednesday that the L.I.P. was an overwhelming success and should be continued.

He told the Commons manpower committee the grant program, similar in concept to the summer Opportunities for Youth scheme, was superior to traditional winter works programs because it was faster in putting money in the hands of "those wielding the pick and shovel."

WIDER YOUTH BASE STUDIED

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is working on plans to extend its youth employment program in response to criticism that its present program — Opportunities for Youth — primarily reaches only middle- and upper-class young people.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said in an interview Wednesday he hopes to have new measures to announce before the summer.

He had said in the Commons' response to questions from Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau that his department is studying various ideas.

Trudeau had reiterated a complaint made in late March by a government study group and last week by Dal Broadhead, executive director of the Company of Young Canadians.

That complaint said youth from underprivileged backgrounds do not generally have the savoir-faire to get together and draft applications for OFY and Local Initiative Program grants, and that this is the very youth most in need of such programs.

CHORAL PROGRAM Friday at McPherson Playhouse will be given a different dimension with the inclusion of A.A. Milne's Man in the Bowler Hat, a one-act comedy staged as a deliberate charade of the 1920s by the Brentwood College Drama Club. This is a guest production in the evening which will feature Brentwood College and Queen Margaret's School choirs conducted by Jim Johnson. In this scene from the play, Patrick Hogan and Paul Rothery threaten Robert Maclean, the "hero" of the piece. Director is T. Gil Bunch. Tickets are on sale at McPherson box office. Starting time, 8 p.m.

750,000 LATE FILERS

OTTAWA (CP) — About 750,000 people are late with their income tax returns this year, a spokesman for the revenue department said Wednesday.

The figures, about the same as last year's, is an estimate because many returns mailed by the May 1 deadline have not yet been received. Persons mailing or handing in their returns after May 1 are liable to a fine of five per cent of tax owing.

Not all the late filers will be fined, however, the spokesman said. Many will have refunds coming and thus no unpaid balance for a fine to be assessed upon.

By May 1 the department has received 7.5 million returns, compared with just over seven million by the same date in 1971. A total of about 9.5 million is expected.

About 4.7 million returns had been processed, compared with 4.1 million last year. Refund cheques printed by May 1 this year totalled four million, worth $545.3 million. Last year by this time 3.4 million refund cheques worth $442.1 million had been printed.

The average refund cheque this year is about $136, up from $124 in 1971.

China Air Link Talks Set

By JOHN BURNS
Special to the Times

PEKING — A direct air link between Vancouver and Shanghai will move a step closer to reality next week when a delegation arrives here from Ottawa to open negotiations with Chinese officials.

Although both sides favor the air link in principle, a number of problems will have to be resolved before a service can be established. This is expected to take at least some months, and possibly more.

If the problems can be overcome, the service would be the first to link China and North America since the Communist takeover in 1949. Its establishment would come at an ideal time, greatly easing the journey for a fast-growing number of passengers.

The Chinese, who have been interested in a trans-Pacific air link for some time, are unlikely to pose many obstacles at the negotiating table. Rather, the principal problems are expected to arise when the time comes to negotiate stopover rights with Japan.

Premier Chou En-lai put his finger on the problem when he discussed the matter with Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin in Peking last summer.

The premier said an air link would be a good idea but wondered where the aircraft would refuel en route.

Rhodesian Right's Cry Alters: 'Good Old Smithy' Should Quit

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith is finding that cries of "good old Smithy" from the country's ruling white minority are turning into open calls for his resignation.

While the fate of the Anglo-Rhodesian settlement terms proposed last November still hangs in the balance, the opinion of whites here is hardening against the settlement and the way chosen to test the acceptability of the proposals in Rhodesia.

A British official commission headed by former high court judge Lord Pearce spent two months here sounding out opinions among the country's five million blacks and 250,000 whites. The verdict of the Pearce commission, which completed its work in March, is anxiously awaited.

Much of the disenchantment being expressed by White Rhodesians against the Smith regime stems from the long, drawn out nature of the settlement negotiations and a growing feeling that the whites will not do as well out of the agreement as they had thought.

Many of them initially supported a settlement of the constitutional deadlock which began with the former British colony's unilateral declaration of independence in 1965.

What turned many of them against Smith was the realization that the complex process of testing whether Rhodesians wanted the settlement — a key pre-condition set by the British government — gave the African majority a chance to say a vociferous "No."

The long delay between Smith and British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home signing the tentative agreement last November and the Pearce commission ending its work gave right-wingers time to spread the idea that the settlement's terms would lead rapidly to African majority rule.

After years of not being taken seriously, the extreme right has organized itself into the United Front party and pledged to ensure that the interests of white Rhodesians remain paramount. Its meetings draw packed audiences in contrast to those of the liberal and multi-racial Centre party, the other main opponent of Smith's Rhodesian Front.

Given a strong leader, the United Front could seriously threaten the Rhodesian Front's present monopoly on the 50 European seats in the Salisbury Parliament. There are now only 16 African seats in the 66-seat assembly.

Smith, now in his ninth year of office, has reason to fear the threat from the extreme right. His own party came to power in 1962 as a result of a white backlash against the liberal policies including framing the 1961 Constitution which granted the Africans significant political advancement.

Both the extreme right party and the liberal Centre party have challenged the government to hold an early election on the settlement issue, apparently in the hope of taking advantage of the situation to pick up a few seats.

But the prime minister, who is not required to hold an election until 1975, has said on several occasions that there is no chance of an early election and no need for one.

DEBUT, STAGE SPOILED

LONDON (AP) — A spectacular musical version of Gone With the Wind opened to ovations in London Wednesday.

day night and Rhett Butler's horse made it truly memorable.

As the burning of Atlanta got under way, Charlie the horse suffered a large-scale attack of first-night nerves which they had to clear up in the interval.

"My God," said a spokesman for Drury Lane Theatre. "Charlie has been rehearsing for four months without ever showing signs of stage fright."

"It was his big chance, and he blew it."

The first night audience overcame giggles at Charlie's unscheduled production and erupted in cheers and applause for Joe Layton's production of the Margaret Mitchell epic of the American Civil War.

Charlie has an understudy named Nellie ready to step into the breach if his weakness persists.

As for the reviewers, the musical is a triumph or a bore, depending on which newspaper critics you read.

But it's spectacular, they all agreed, and should be in for a long run.

'Back Police'

CALGARY (CP) — Police must have the confidence and the backing of the public when carrying out their job, says Neil German, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

He told a service club banquet Tuesday that laws must be respected because they are the only defence against mob rule, chaos "or some form of dictatorship."

Moving Patrol Car Can Nab Speeders

EDMONTON (CP) — RCMP highway patrols in Alberta this month will begin using a speed-calculating device which can nab speeders from a moving patrol car.

The new system, called VASCAR for Visual Average Speed Computer and Recorder, is an electronic device that enables an officer to check a car's speed coming and going, behind or ahead of the police vehicle.

An Edmonton RCMP spokesman said the new system is a vast improvement over the old radar method which in most cases required two patrol cars. Also, "radar sites were quickly detected by motorists and then lost their value."

The new equipment, less expensive than standard radar, operates on the principle of speed equalling distance divided by time. An officer can measure the time it takes a vehicle to cover a certain distance and from the measurements, the device automatically computes the average speed.

The system has been used extensively throughout the United States and in Nova Scotia.

Personnel operating the equipment in Alberta have undergone 30-day training courses.

OTTAWA CASH FLOWS SLOWLY

CALGARY (CP) — Spokesmen for some Local Initiatives Projects said Wednesday they were facing financial problems because they haven't received cheques from the federal make-work program.

Some have bank overdrafts and others have had to take out temporary loans to meet payroll commitments after waiting for more than a month for the regional headquarters in Winnipeg to process report forms.

"Things are a mess and that is for sure," said Jim McMahon, director of a program called HELP which does home repair and odd jobs for senior citizens, handicapped families and single parent families.

"I had to take out a bank loan to pay the 20 people we employ ... I phoned the Winnipeg office of LIP April 5 to ask where the cheque was, and they told me it would be here by April 10.

"We are still waiting. A week ago they told us we had a mistake on our report forms. Why couldn't they have told us that right away?"

Lawrence Oshanek of the Con-Cern Society, which places ex-convicts in jobs, says his project workers have been "practically crying all over the place."

Merchants Fear Barrow Barrage To Hurt Image

Bastion Square merchants complained today that the square's "image" will be ruined if students are allowed to set up barrows there selling their handicrafts.

The merchants also told city council's parks committee that council policy giving established merchants on the square protection from competition by peddlars should be "strictly adhered to."

Aldermen's sympathies seemed to be about equally divided between the merchants and the students, but the committee decided to ask Ald. Clyde Savage, whose responsibility is tourism, to try to find an alternative city site for the young entrepreneurs.

Doris Bernard, of 3136 Jackson, on behalf of the 17 high school students, said they had operated "flea market" stalls last summer in Market Street, but the businesses which sponsored them had withdrawn their support this year.

The youngsters hoped to sell their wares from rented barrows in Bastion Square, because "most of them have nothing else to do — that's what it amounts to," Mrs. Bernard said.

"They're nice kids but there are just no jobs available. Everyone seems to think this is a great idea but no one seems prepared to help."

A letter to the committee, signed by several merchants of the Village Fair complex of shops in Bastion Square, warned that unless a firm policy was followed the square would be "overrun with barrows to maintain a dignified atmosphere. This atmosphere represents five years, on a year-round basis, against an occasional summer tourist-oriented invasion."

Parks committee chairman Ald. Ove Witt said while his sympathies were with the young people, he was afraid that issuing a permit in this instance might lead to a flood of similar requests.

He said from the merchants' point of view, having to "sweat it out" for nine slack months of the year and then face competition from peddlars in the summer months is "really a disaster."

Witt said he knew that a request for a street "flower cart business" was imminent, and expressed concern at the possible growth of this type of business activity.

Mayor Peter Pollen, however, didn't consider this would be any real problem, provided some discretion were used.

He pointed out that San Francisco has its street musicians and European cities have their street flower sellers which are "very attractive."

rows... causing confusion and diversion from private enterprise businesses inside, for those of us who pay business and sales taxes.

"We wish to preserve the image of Bastion Square, where every effort has been made to maintain a dignified atmosphere. This atmosphere represents five years, on a year-round basis, against an occasional summer tourist-oriented invasion."

"Wherever we decide to build, it will be a second store," Witt said. "We will not desert downtown Victoria."

SECOND EATON'S PLANNED BY '75 Outlook 'Promising' For New Hospital

By DON VIPOND

Times Staff

MLA Herb Bruch predicted today plans for a 225-bed hospital at Helmcken and the Trans-Canada Highway could be on the drawing boards in a few weeks if the regional hospital board approves the project.

The hospital would be for so-called extended care patients, mostly elderly chronically ill people who require nursing around the clock.

The Juan de Fuca Hospital Society recently offered Health Minister Ralph Loffmark a "package proposal" to develop and operate the hospital. A letter from Loffmark to the regional hospital board this week indicates support.

Bruch said Loffmark has assured him he will do everything he can to speed the project.

PROMISING'

Art Young, regional hospital board chairman, confirmed a letter from Loffmark on the hospital proposal has been received and it looks "promising."

He declined further comment until the matter has been considered by the regional hospital board executive.

The 34-acre site proposed will cost an estimated $221,000 if the purchase goes ahead and the hospital itself about $2.25 million.

Bruch said it might take about a year and a half to build. It would see completion of plans to add 600 hospital beds in Greater Victoria for extended care patients with funds provided partly by referendum four years ago.

The regional hospital board, in consultation with the province, had proposed purchase of the site last year but Loffmark thought the price of $6,500 an acre too high.

DONATED

There are indications the sisters operating St. Mary's Priory will donate $1,500 an acre to a maximum of $51,000 toward the land purchase price and this could be what has led Loffmark to look with more favor on the project recently.

The program for extended care beds has 300 near completion alongside Gorge Road rehabilitation hospital. They had been scheduled to be available for patients this summer but the current construction lockout has stopped work about two months short of completion.

Another 75 beds are to be built in the first phase of a new hospital in Central Saanich but this is still mired in paperwork.

Zaps Our Man At the Helm

For 10 terrifying minutes the fate of the cream of Victoria's society was in my hands Wednesday afternoon.

I was at the helm of the CPR's Princess Patricia during the annual pre-season cruise for mayors, aldermen, merchants and provincial dignitaries.

It was 10 of the longest and busiest minutes of my life. My performance was nothing to write home about but at least I didn't bump into The Empress.

I began when I went up top to chat with Capt. Pendry Harris in the wheelhouse. On impulse I asked if I might drive.

The captain hesitated a moment.

"Why not?" he finally said.

In his 30 years afloat he had endured just about everything.

He pointed to the compass which registered at 130.

"Just hold it to that course."

"Aye, aye, sir."

* * *

But the 8,000-ton ship had a will of her own. She started drifting.

"To port. Quickly. Turn to port."

"Right," I said. Then paused. "Uh, which way is that?"

It was hard work.

"My guess," the captain said, observing my arm action, "is that you might last about 20 minutes as a helmsman."

My own estimate was that I would last about three minutes.

Every time I swung the wheel to get her back on course she went far to the other way. To steer successfully you have to keep moving and in effect steer two minutes ahead of the ship.

I couldn't hold the course at 130.

"Let's try at 120 then," the captain said.

I spun the wheel again and finally brought her into what passed for a steady course.

Translated that means we did not go aground. We did not run anybody down.

* * *

I checked the wake. A beautiful zig-zag pattern.

"Very good," the captain said kindly.

When I relinquished the wheel I had a smart salute for first mate Raymond Hudson and the rest of the crew. It was then I discovered my arm was sore.

Helmsmen must be a rugged breed.

Downstairs the guests were being treated to a sumptuous feast and an address of welcome by Harry Tyson, CPR manager of marine operations in Vancouver.

The cruise was supposed to be on the Princess Marguerite, he explained, but it is undergoing last-minute check in preparation for the season's first run up from Seattle on Friday. The Marguerite's car space has been expanded from 52 to 100 and more seats and dining space have been added.

The Patricia, meanwhile, is ready to begin cruises to Alaska from Vancouver.

The guests had high praise for the cooks, the captain and the helmsman, although some remarked that the Patricia did seem to be drifting a bit for 10 minutes of the journey.

Drifting? From the wheelhouse it felt like I was wandering all over the Pacific Ocean.

... "gobbledygook"

Wordy Brief Riles Christie

Some of the words in a brief presented by Beacon Hill Parks Association to city parks committee today were anything but brief.

There were words like "exponential growth" and "linear process" ... and they really flummoxed one alderman.

Association secretary John Newberry, who read the brief, was interrupted as he got to one particularly wordy section.

"Pardon me, mister," said Ald. Tom Christie, "what kind of gobbledygook are you dishing up here? What does all this have to do with Beacon Hill Park?"

Newberry explained that he was trying to distinguish between different patterns of world growth, then concluded the brief by saying: "Our association hopes Victoria will be one of the first cities in Canada to begin to make decisions which reflect its grasp of the implications of continuing exponential growth."

The brief, referring to a plan to phase cars out of the park, said the association hoped council would look on this as "the first bold and imaginative step towards creating a quiet and lovely oasis in central Victoria."

Association vice-president Jim Beaubien told the committee: "Basically, we want to see the cars moved out of the park so that there is more room for people."

Committee chairman Ald. Ove Witt said the phasing out process would take place over a period of years, with the first phase being recommended to start soon.

Billboards Still Boost Tobacco

Billboards advertising tobacco products are still in evidence in Victoria, despite Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's directive Monday that they should be taken down.

Most of the signs are on billboards of Seaboard Advertising Co. Ltd., of whom Peterson requested an end to the advertising Monday. He said then Seaboard has been the main company continuing advertising of tobacco products since the government banned it in 1971.

A quick check of the downtown area today revealed at least six tobacco billboards.

"Craven A" tobacco was advertised on boards at the 700-block Broughton, Pandora and Quadra, and on Bay St. at both Rock Bay Ave. and Turner.

A "Player's" sign is on a wall at Chatham and Douglas and there is a large sign advertising "Du Maurier" atop a building at Douglas and Bay.

At three different locations, signs appear to have been recently converted from tobacco advertising to requests for aid for the Easter seal campaign. The signs resembled the cover of a "Macdonald's Export" cigarette package, green in color with the familiar face of a woman in a circle in the centre.

These signs carry the message: Have you checked a crippled child? Easter seals.

From Vancouver, Seaboard president J. M. Finlayson said his firm "is seeking the advice of our solicitor" before taking any action on the billboards.

Peterson, in his Monday request, did not specify a time period after which billboard advertisers of tobacco products will be prosecuted but said his office would carry out enforcement proceedings if the warning is not heeded.

Anderson: Just What the Doctor Ordered

Still and all, and assuming that David Anderson will move unimpeded to B.C. Liberal leadership, our next provincial election should be a mighty interesting one.

As a federal member, he has refused to settle for the backbencher's traditional benchman role in Parliament. Quite otherwise, in fact.

Anderson has proved himself to be a hard-nose capable of independent action, and if he has displeased Liberal top brass by his oil transport fight, he has won strong approval here at home.

That, of course, isn't going to happen overnight. When polling-time rolls round again, Bennett is likely to demonstrate that he remains what he has been in earlier joustings — a political shoo-in. If he runs, that is. And run he must, or pop goes the Sacred weasel!

The vigorous presence of Anderson in Greater Victoria's contention would certainly help make it so.

As a federal member, he has refused to settle for the backbencher's traditional benchman role in Parliament. Quite otherwise, in fact.

Anderson has proved himself to be a hard-nose capable of independent action, and if he has displeased Liberal top brass by his oil transport fight, he has won strong approval here at home.

But as a powerful Liberal candidate for a Vancouver Island riding, he could expect a Sacred zeroing-in of that party which attended that party's massive if not too fortunate drive to secure Oak Bay.

Projecting farther, and for the moment disregarding the notorious uncertainties that attend elections, Anderson as house captain of the Liberal block might well have a tonic little house of commons.

My impression is that some of these were wasted to legislative seats almost in spite of themselves.

But time passes, and it may be that even British Columbia's master of illusion has suffered a weakening of the old magic.

The question-and-answer session on radio time has so far provided more comedy than inspiration. The Columbia deal, so new and shiny when it rolled off the line, is showing a hint of rust on its bumpers.

In an aging government, the trend from persuasion to compulsion has become noticeable.

The electoral climate of this province doesn't yet strike me as right for a political upheaval, much as I would welcome one. But if anyone can achieve a drastic increase in Liberal legislative strength, I think David Anderson is the man to do it.

Scandinavian City Planning

Pollen's Model

Canadians have a long way to go to create Scandinavian-style cities, Mayor Peter Pollen told members of Victoria's Women's Canadian Club Wednesday.

Pollen talked about city planning and showed slides of Scandinavian and North American cities at the club's annual meeting, held in the Newcombe Auditorium: Provincial Museum.

"Our environments and our cities are a reflection of us and we in politics are a reflection of you," Pollen said. Only by getting the right people into politics can good environments and cities be created, he said.

Pollen mentioned other areas of concern in Canadian cities.

The Scandinavians are very conscious of creating good environments for their children," said Pollen. He showed a slide of a Danish day care centre, and slides of apartment houses and shopping centres in Scandinavia with play areas for children. "Our citizens have immense social problems as a result of the lack of day care centres," he said.

Pollen mentioned other areas of concern in Canadian cities.

The danger of large clusters of high rise apartments, as in West Vancouver or New York City, "sofless, childless, about as barren as the values that we're stating."

High density housing, such as high-rise apartments, is necessary, said Pollen, but these towering buildings should be in a natural environment, should have green space between them.

The steadily growing car population in Victoria. The city now has more than 100,000 cars, compared with 48,000 in 1960, said Pollen. The answer for Victoria could be a rapid bus system, for Vancouver an underground transit system, he said.

Protecting shoreline areas for the general public. In Scandinavia, apartment buildings are set well back from the shoreline, he said.

Mayor Pollen

Inner Harbor will be built on the waterfront. Original plans for the development gave it a very high population density that would have "completely overwhelmed" the surrounding areas, said Pollen. New plans have cut the density by half, he said.

"I think the new concept, while I'm not personally in love with it, is a good compromise," he said.

The importance of preventing views of mountains and parks from being blocked by tall buildings. Pollen singled out the Orchard House apartment building on Michigan Street which not only blocks the view of the Olympic Mountains but dwarfs the legislative buildings in front of it.

The James Bay area has been hemmed in by high rise apartments, "leaving the poor people in the middle to fight for themselves," he said. Ideally the high rises should have been built in the centre of James Bay and smaller buildings on the outside, so all could have a view of Beacon Hill Park and the water, he said.

Controlling the number of commercial signs along streets. He showed a slide of part of Douglas Street that is crowded with different commercial neon signs.

Separating people from traffic in the inner city. "We must be bold and innovative and close off some of our streets, such as Government Street," Pollen said.

Protecting and restoring old buildings.

Burying hydro wires along narrow streets. This is commonplace in Scandinavian cities, he said.

Mrs. R. R. Jeffers was sworn in as president of the Women's Canadian Club at its annual meeting, replacing retiring president Mrs. Wilfred Davenport.

Housewives Get a Break In Final Status Report

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal Party study group has given Prime Minister Trudeau a series of recommendations which, if implemented, would give housewives a better break on pensions and retraining.

The three-member group, appointed to look into the report of the royal commission on the status of women, presented its recommendations after cross-Canada studies and consultations with 2,000 Liberals.

A key recommendation, to remove abortion from the Criminal Code, says:

Remove Abortion from Code

"The subject of abortion should be removed from the Criminal Code with the exception of penalties when it is performed by medically unqualified people and/or in unsuitable surroundings."

The group also recommended that:

- Single parents and the heads of all families receive a guaranteed annual income.

- Party or public funds be used to back candidates in federal elections. Only 2.4 per cent of candidates in 15 general elections were women, and the main reason was women lacked money to conduct a campaign.

- More women be appointed to the Senate, courts and boards and commissions.

- The Liberal party should "take definite steps to seek out and support competent women candidates."

- Laws to prevent discrimination against women in job employment should be enforced. The group noted "fairly sizable pay gaps" between male and female employees.

- A federal Human Rights Commission be set up to enforce anti-discriminatory legislation and the Bill of Rights to be amended to forbid discrimination on the basis of sex or marital status."

The federal government seek agreement with the provinces for the adoption of a national day-care act. "Mothers of small children cannot enjoy equal opportunity in the labor force without day-care centres and the same principle applies to a widowed father who is left with young children."

The centres should be funded by a combination of federal and provincial governments, "and parents on a sliding scale based on ability to pay."

The report says the spouse remaining at home should be credited with a portion of the contributions made by the working partner to the Canada Pension Plan — or else be allowed to contribute as a self-employed worker.

There are few opportunities for part-time work in Canadian society, it says, and the government should make a study to see whether there is more room for such employment in the Canadian economy.

The federal public service should permit working mothers to take two months' summer leave without pay and without loss of seniority.

Birth control information should be made available to everyone wanting it. Family planning clinics should be established in both cities and remote areas.

The student-loan plan should be broadened to cover part-time students "in order to enable more women to pursue their education."

The report also recommends that housework be recognized as the equivalent to paid employment regarding eligibility for federal training allowances.

Joint Tax Return

Husbands and wives should be permitted to file a joint income tax return, and the Canadian Citizenship Act should be amended to provide that a child born outside Canada is a natural-born Canadian if either of the parents is a Canadian citizen.

Another recommendation was that the federal prison for women at Kingston be closed and replaced by "a series of small, cottage-like half-way houses across Canada." At present, many female prisoners were too far from home to be visited by family and friends.

The report now is in the hands of Manpower Minister Bryce Mackay, who has been given the job of co-ordinating government action on status-of-women reports.

The study group consisted of Jan Steele, former executive vice-president of the Liberal party in Ontario; Marie Gibeault, president of the Women's Liberal Federation of Canada, and Esther Greenglass, professor of psychology at York University in Toronto.

Abby, we've put up with this parade of relatives for 26 years and I don't think I can stand another hot summer of cooking and entertaining mooching relatives.

What makes city folks think their farm relatives own them a free vacation? And how come they never think of inviting their country cousins to the city for a change? — Farmer's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: I see your point. Now, let's hear it from the city folks.

DEAR ABBY: The day before our wedding my husband took all my pictures out of his wallet. He said a married man does not carry his wife's pictures, just pictures of the single girls he used to know.

Abby, I really wouldn't have minded so much if he had kept these girls' pictures in his wallet if only he hadn't taken mine out.

Do you think my husband was right or not? — Very Hurt.

DEAR VIVIEN: I think your husband is about 180 degrees wrong! When a man marries, he should remove from his wallet all the pictures of the girls he used to know, and carry only his wife's.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HURT AND PUZZLED": Don't believe second-hand tales. Ask your mother-in-law if she has ever complained to the family about the way you impose on her by leaving the baby with her.

Ian and Grace MacGregor-Irving bought Xanadu in January

Every Inch A Lady Now

By PAT DUFOUR

Times Staff

Some of her past is shady, but the 110-foot Xanadu was every inch a lady Thursday as she eased dockside in the Inner Harbor.

This was the first glimpse of Victoria for her skipper, Ian MacGregor-Irving.

Not so his ship, which began her career as an American sub-chaser in 1917.

Lusty '20s

She knew these waters well in the lusty 1920s when, as the Reindeer, her powerful engines made her expert in the role of rum runner.

Those were the days when the bottled cargo was hustled

You'd never suspect she was once expert in role of rum runner from Victoria to California and could net the owners $1 million a trip or free lodging in a federal prison.

The ship would lie off the Farrallon Islands, just west of San Francisco's Golden Gate until speedy craft could whip out under cover of darkness or fog to pick up a load.

During part of those times she worked in conjunction with another rumrunner, then called Algoma but now, respectable in Vancouver, sails under the name of Salt Mist.

Records at the Maritime Museum suggest, but are unable to give exact proof, that the former rumrunner made up for her prohibition days' career during the Second World War.

In the files are two pictures of a converted yacht, HMCS Reindeer, taken over by the Royal Canadian Navy. The hull lines bear a marked resemblance to the ship now muzzled up alongside in Victoria.

MacGregor-Irving swears that the wood-panelled walls of her dining room have looked down on many a boisterous party, some of them attended by American gangster Al Capone.

Colorful Past

Ian and Grace MacGregor-Irving bought the Xanadu in January.

Her skipper's background is almost as colorful as hers.

A Scot, MacGregor-Irving served 22 years with the Royal Navy, several of them as a pilot with the Fleet Air Arm.

Since then, he's roamed the seas, running charter boats in the West Indies and other places.

He's done more than his stint of racing under sail, one of the highlights being when he crewed aboard the British 12-metre Sceptre in the 1958 America's Cup classic.

He's also tasted the zest of racing in the Bermuda and Trans-Pac testers.

Now, both he and his ship are heading for quieter times.

He and his wife are looking for a home port in this area from which to charter.

The Xanadu, still able to steam up to 18 knots, has newly-installed twin 380 h.p. diesels.

'Pocket Money' Buys Pensioners' Needs

OTTAWA (CP) — Old age pensions prevent old people from dying, but don't enable them to live, says Hubert de Ravinel, a member of the lay order, Les Petits Frères des Pauvres of Montreal.

Montreal has a population of about 180,000 persons over 65 and about half of them have incomes of less than $110 a month, he said. After paying rent, they have about $25 to $30 a month for food.

"Drugs may take a large slice out of the budget; then one must choose between food and treatment. For food and medical care, these old people have, in sum, an amount which the rest of us would spend on pocket money or on cigarettes alone."

Justice for Aging

Mr. de Ravinel made the comments in an article on Justice for the Aging in the March issue of On Growing Old, a publication of the Canadian Council on Social development.

In the minds of most, he said, old age is supposed to start at the time of retirement. This is when a man is considered "unproductive" and is rejected from the mainstream.

He "becomes a lesser consumer because of the rather painfully abrupt decrease in his resources."

Canada has about 1.8 million individuals over 65 today, but by 1980 the number will have grown to about 2.5 million. As well, the working population may also have to support many more "unproductive" members if there is a decrease in the retirement age. On the other hand, efforts are paying off in society's efforts to prolong life, which also will help increase the numbers of the elderly, Mr. de Ravinel said.

"These rejects, much younger than the former ones, will perhaps be strong enough to react and revolt... The elderly proletarians of the Western world have neither the strength nor the energy to question and revolt. If, indeed, they had it, we would witness revolution in our streets."

Mr. de Ravinel said a solution depends on society and its attitude toward the aged. It also depends on governments, which must use both imagination and money on the problem.

He recommended several starting steps, including:

- An increase in the old age pension.
- Flexibility on the retirement age, which at present falls like a guillotine at age 65, and creation of part-time employment opportunities.

- Community responsibility for some of the expenses, such as drugs and dental care, for the elderly.

Establish Clubs

Establishment of recreation clubs, social centres and organizations for the elderly, but with participation as well from all age groups.

Establishment of more home-care services, such as homemakers, visiting nurses, dietary help, so the elderly can remain at home.

Review of low-cost housing projects, ensuring that the housing is near recreation centres, shopping and services and that the individuals can remain in centres where they have spent their working years.

More Protein for 'Dogs'

By JEFF CARRUTHERS

Special to the Times

OTTAWA — When it comes to protein content, wieners and frankfurters to some just aren't what they used to be.

And the federal government has decided to do something about it.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, head of the health protection branch, says his officials are drafting regulations to set a "floor" on the required protein content of wieners and sausage products generally.

He indicated that wiener makers will be required, later this year, to put more protein into their products than most are putting in now.

Whereas a wiener 10 years ago had an average of 14½ per cent protein in it, modern-day wieners have 12 per cent protein. And the protein content threatens to drop even farther down.

By setting a minimum level — a "floor" — on protein content, the health department will indirectly control the amount of fat and other "filler" now routinely added to wiener and sausage products, he suggested.

At present, there is no minimum protein requirement for wieners and sausage products in Canada, according to Dr. Morrison.

The government will require the protein content, mostly beef or pork products, to be higher in the future, under the planned regulations.

The federal food and drugs act does require that "fresh sausage" cannot contain more than 40 per cent fat.

animal fat as filler; beef tripe; liver; fresh blood; blood plasma; cooked, partially defatted beef fatty tissue; cooked, partially defatted pork fatty tissue; and dried skim milk products, not to exceed three per cent of the final weight.

Highballs and Krisps For This Baby Shower

Seven months ago my friend Mildred phoned. From what little I could understand over her hysterical sobbing, it seemed that her parakeet, Sonny, had died.

Not a particularly sociable bird, Sonny was notorious for executing kame-kaze-style raids at guests while swearing in Japanese and flinging birdseed into their coffee.

"I'm so sorry, Mil," I said. "I know how fond you were of Sonny."

"I'm not talking about that lousy parakeet," Mildred sobbed. "I said bunny, not Sonny."

"But you don't have a rabbit . . . you mean THE bunny?"

"I thought I had the flu!" she wailed.

Now Mildred isn't terribly old. But anyone who claims that she couldn't take a bath until she was 3-years-old because the bathtub was always full of gin isn't what I call young, either. Not only had Mildred given away all her baby furniture when her son started college, but she had also disposed of her maternity clothes some time during the Eisenhower administration. By her sixth month of pregnancy, she had taken on the graceful proportions of a giant Anjou pear and had outgrown everything but a blue permanent press sheet, which she insisted upon wearing Gandhi-style. I finally persuaded her to accompany me to a maternity shop.

"I would like to see something matronly in size 16 1/2," Mildred announced, flinging the end of her blue sheet regally over her shoulder. The only semi-suitable outfit was a green dress that zipped 'up the front.'

Having a shower for a woman Mildred's age is a bit different from a normal shower. Instead of cake, candied almonds, and weak tea, I served bourbon highballs and ryekrisp. And instead of velvet dresses with white lace panties, she received eight pairs of brown corduroy overalls.

Last week our son asked me how a woman gets pregnant. "By giving away all her baby furniture," I replied. This probably wasn't the answer that he expected, but I was busy planting ivy in his old potty chair. It doesn't do much for the living room decor, but Mildred swears that it will keep me from getting pregnant.

Just Asking For Trouble

EDMONTON (CP)

Young women who hitch-hike invite motorists "to believe their purpose is not entirely innocent," Mr. Justice A. M. Duchene of the Alberta Supreme Court said this week.

He made the statement as he found a 28-year-old married man guilty of raping a 17-year-old high school student.

Court was told the girl hitched a ride in downtown Edmonton and was driven into the country by two men. She said she was raped twice.

Stampeders Top Victorian Days

A Toronto-based pop music group — Stampeders — top the bill at a Salute to Britain revue during Victorian Days May 20-27.

The McPherson Playhouse stage show runs from Wednesday through Saturday of that week, a feature of Victorian Days. Society annual festivities which this year are keyed to British links.

Stampeders originated in Calgary and are known for their selection in 1971 as top Canadian vocal and instrumental group and their gold record Sweet City Woman.

They are also said to have drive, spontaneity and humor and a list of bookings across the continent and on both sides of the border.

A music hall comedy team — Arden and Maisie — will give the show its British content with skits, song and dance which they have ad libbed all over Canada, the western U.S. and abroad to the Orient.

Both are British-born but with long experience in the U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — Last year there were almost two U.S. visitors to Canada for every Canadian, Statistics Canada reports.

Total visitors by U.S. residents were 35.4 million, a 3.5-per-cent increase from 1970. As well, there were 54,300 visitors from overseas countries.

Canada earned $1.3 billion from spending by foreign visitors, but Canadians travelling in other lands spent $1.5 billion.

Visitors from Britain totalled 150,251 last year, a drop of 7,485 from the year before and the largest decrease for any country.

Now Ready for Sowing

The only slow thing about spring this year will be starting annual vegetable and flowering plants on their outdoor life.

Even that will be adjusted if we suddenly are projected into a warm sunny spell of weather. (Incidentally, you'll hear an immediate cry go up, "Isn't it hot!").

Soils which are sandy or gravelly, but have been well treated with compost humus by the gardener are ready for sowing vegetable seeds or flower seeds. These must be hardy kinds and varieties which grow well in cool weather, leaving the more tender ones for sowing towards the end of May.

We sow in rows marked out with a string or two sticks for convenience of thinning, weeding and watering, also to get maximum use out of our garden space.

The row method also helps in making the best use of compost if the supply is limited. I know only two gardeners who have provided themselves with all the compost they can use, and their gardens show the results in summer moisture-holding and resultant fertility.

After marking the row, hoe and rake a strip four to six inches wide, breaking down lumps of soil and removing the larger stones to the walkways between the rows. They attract and hold warmth, transmitting it to the soil; and moisture is retained beneath.

Next, take shovels of well-rotted compost from the bottom or centre of your heap. The outside may still have last year's dried grass sticking out, but don't worry about that. Slim off the outside to go into the new heap you are making now.

For seed sowing, the soil must be reasonably fine so that close contact is made between seed and soil. Rub the compost through a half-inch wire screen with a gloved hand, getting all the fibre broken down by removing any solid pieces of root.

If you are short of compost, you may have some old cow or horse manure to mix with it; but not chicken manure or you are likely to have lots of green tops and small roots on vegetables, or no flowers or seeds, according to your crops.

Peat moss is not a good substitute for compost in vegetable sowing, since it has a definite acid reaction. One shovel of peat moss (Dampened before adding) to four of compost, rubbed through the screen and thoroughly mixed with the compost, would be acceptable.

Spread an inch layer of screened compost along the slightly depressed row taken out with a hoe; sprinkle with warm water from a watering can; sow the seeds; cover to appropriate depth with more screened compost; then sprinkle again with warm water to firm the covering.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One afternoon back in the early 1950s, the late Sidney Silodor was playing in a local Philadelphia duplicate game with one of his pupils. On the pupil's convention card was written: "Silodor Grand Slam Force."

On the very first round of play, an opponent asked the pupil to explain the meaning of the bid (private partnership understandings are not permitted, of course). The pupil pointed to Silodor and said: "Ask him! I pay him $50 a lesson."

Since that time, the "Grand Slam Force" has been adopted by virtually all of our better players. It is a jump bid to five notrump after there has been partnership agreement in a suit, and the bidder wants to contract for at least a small slam in that suit. If partner has the "right cards," the latter is commanded to bid a grand slam. The "right cards" consist of two of the three top trumps: either A-K, A-Q, or K-Q.

Here is a deal in which Silodor successfully employed his Grand Slam Force. Silodor was in the North Seat. Silodor was the North Force.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

In this case, specifically the ace and king, since North had the queen). South obliged.

There was no ambiguity in the five-notrump call, since, by implication, spades had to be the agreed-upon suit, although North had never actually supported the suit by word of mouth.

The play presented no problem. West's opening lead of the heart ace was ruffed in dummy, after which the adversely-held three trumps were picked up. The board's six diamonds were then cashed, South discarding a club and his remaining three hearts. The ace of clubs and the rest of South's trumps took the rest of the tricks.

Although Silodor was opposed to many of the conventional gadgets of his time, feeling that their defects were usually greater than their advantages, he felt that the Grand Slam Force was a "must" if optimum results were to be obtained. The acceptance of this convention by the world's better players has demonstrated that he was correct.

UNITED CHURCH RACIST, CLAIMS TORONTO JEW

SASKATOON (CP) — Dr. Emil L. Fackenheim, a Jewish theologian from Toronto, says the United Church of Canada is practising antisemitism through its official magazine, the United Church Observer.

"The United Church Observer has shown an ever-increasing anti-Jewish bias," he told the convocation at St. Andrew's College where he received an honorary doctorate of divinity. The college is operated by the United Church.

"United Church officials, while taking refuge behind the editor's freedom of speech, have either themselves kept silent, or else used their freedom of speech only to defend the policies of the editor, or even attack, often vociferously, those who opposed those policies."

The Observer, he said, reached a new level of lending respectability to hatred of the Jewish people when it printed an article by John Nichols Booth in its March issue.

The article promoted the inferiority of the black race, secret Zionist attacks on food and a Zionist threat to United States' liberties, said Dr. Fackenheim.

"The extraordinary and irrational views of the editor of The Observer have long since ceased to amaze the Jewish community. What causes continued amazement and pain is the silence and, even active compliance of officialdom."

"No wonder the Canadian Jewish community thinks the United Church of Canada is monolithically anti-Jewish. How could it think otherwise?"

Dr. Fackenheim said he regarded the invitation to accept the honorary degree as a repudiation of the magazine's policies.

"I have decided to grasp the hand which I know is offered sincerely, not only to me, but to the whole Jewish people."

Some Jews in his community showed astonishment and disbelief at the news that he was to receive the honor, he said. Others were fearful and suspicious.

He said the two reactions, while partially mistaken, were largely justified.

Dr. Fackenheim said the Observer also had emphasized the plight of Arab refugees in the Middle East to the neglect of Jewish refugees.

QUEBEC (CP) — Civil Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier said Wednesday the government has rejected a proposal by the Quebec Teachers' Corp. that an advisory group arbitrate certain aspects of a contract dispute between teachers and the Quebec government.

He told the national assembly's civil service committee: "we are opposed to any form of arbitration whatsoever."

Yvon Charbonneau, president of the 70,000-member teachers' union, said earlier Wednesday, teachers would accept the conclusions of the Superior Council of Education on some disputed questions such as workload and teacher-student ratios if the government also would agree to accept them.

The council is an independent body set up by the government to advise on educational matters.

Mr. Charbonneau, Marcel Pepin, president of the National Confederation of Trade Unions, and Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, are to appear in court today to answer contempt-of-court citations resulting from last month's strike by about 200,000 Quebec public service workers.

The union leaders could be charged with urging members to ignore injunctions aimed at maintaining essential services during the 11-day strike or with challenging the government's back-to-work order.

COULD FACE FINES

They could face fines of up to $50,000 and a year in jail.

The public service strike ended April 22 following emergency legislation passed by the Quebec government after more than 22 hours of continuous debate.

Mr. L'Allier and Education Minister Francois Cloutier made it clear the Superior Council of Education cannot make pronouncements on negotiations that would bind the government, but they did not rule out the possibility that it would be asked to report on the matter.

Third-party activity in negotiations with the common front of public service workers, including the teachers, has been opposed by Mr.

L'Allier who says the government has made its last offer to the unions and is still waiting for a counteroffer.

The unions have demanded a $100 weekly minimum salary for all 200,000 persons involved, plus wage increases amounting to seven per cent annually over three years.

The government says its latest proposal is for a 5.3-to-six per cent annual increase over three years.

Bennett Keeps Mum

Times News Services

Premier Bennett today refused any detailed comment on the federal government's foreign take-over policy and observed: "We don't want to go overboard to praise it or to knock it."

The policy, based on recommendations of the Gray report on foreign ownership, would make takeovers of Canadian firms by foreigners subject to federal cabinet approval. The policy was announced in the federal cabinet Tuesday.

Bennett did however, reiterate a point he has made before: that the people of British Columbia own their natural resources and there is "no way they can be taken over by an outside company."

The Premier said that he had a letter dealing with the policy from Prime Minister Trudeau and that he expected to meet with the author of the report. He did not know when such a meeting would take place.

NO COMMENT

"But I don't intend to make any detailed comments until after we have those discussions," Bennett said.

He added that he regarded the policy as "part of a political package and I don't think you will see the bill passed until after a federal election."

Bennett also said that during the next provincial legislative session, he would introduce legislation aimed at aiding the development of agricultural products and the establishment of manufacturing and secondary industry.

"We need all the foreign investment we can get but there is no question of foreign companies taking over Canadian companies in B.C. he said.

Interviewed Tuesday, Ray Williston, minister of lands, forests and natural resources, claimed that the B.C. situation was just the opposite of what it might be in other provinces.

"There have been no cases here of foreign firms taking over Canadian firms. But we have had cases of Canadian firms taking over foreign ones."

NDP CRITICAL
NDP Leader Dave Barrett was critical of the policy, saying that "Mr. Trudeau is becoming more and more like Mr. Bennett every day."

"This absolute cabinet authority poses a matter of great importance for all Canadians," he said.

He urged that specific instances of takeover bids by foreign companies go before the commons committee and all recommendations be discussed by the House before they go to cabinet.

"Cabinet power leaves any political party under special pressures," he said, "especially when the time comes to finance a political campaign."

Barrett also doubted if in practice B.C. or any other province would have any part in discussions on specific bids. "Everything will be referred to the (federal) cabinet."

Liberals Leader Dr. Pat McGee also criticized the policy as being too vague and depending too much on the judgment of the cabinet.

"It opens up an air of mystery as far as the government is concerned," he said. "It will be difficult to judge what the cabinet reaction will be."

But he added that he did not believe the policy would "alter the course of Canadian destiny very much."

"If we Canadians are to take hold of our own economy, we'll have to do more than that," McGee said.

The foreign ownership policy generally evoked mixed reactions from politicians, was favored by businessmen and was damned by some labor leaders.

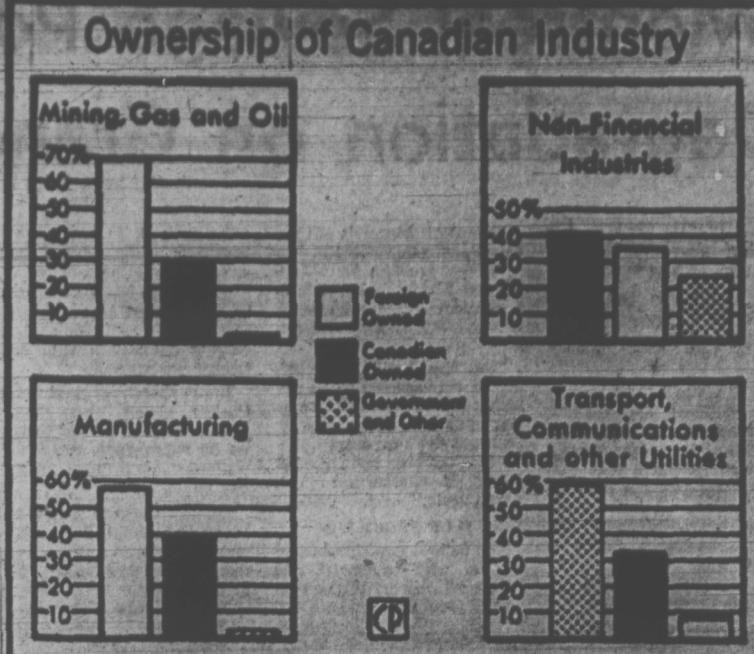

All saw the draft legislation as a moderate, middle-of-the-road measure. Those who feared extensive restrictions on foreign investments were relieved while others were disappointed at the absence of stronger measures to set limits on foreign control of Canadian industries.

Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia and Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick saw nothing in the draft legislation that would hinder much-needed foreign investment and technology. Premier Regan said he could not find "any real complaint" with the federal proposals.

However, Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland feared the controls might be used "for political purposes" and said he believed an independent review board would be better.

Prince Edward Island Premier Alex Campbell declined comment, and premiers William Davis of Ontario and Robert Bourassa of Quebec were not available for comment.

In the West, Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said the RELATIONSHIP of Canadian to foreign-owned industries is illustrated by graph above. The estimated $30 billion or more worth of Canadian business assets owned by aliens — 80 per cent of it American — includes ownership of 70 per cent of our mining, oil and gas industries and 58 per cent of all Canadian manufacturing assets.

draft legislation will do no harm to the Canadian economy, but its effectiveness will depend on other economic development measures.

Alberta Premier Peter

Louheed said he was pleased the federal policy was less restrictive than suggested in the report of the working group headed by federal Revenue Minister Herb Gray. But Allan Blakeney, Saskatchewan's premier, said the government proposals did not come to grips with the problem of regaining control of industry in Canada.

The Gray study argues in favor of greater "rationalization" of the production of Canadian industry, as well as specialization in certain areas of technology.

At present, Canada in a simple sense has two types of companies: the "branch

Look of Industry to Change

By JEFF CARRUTHERS

OTTAWA — The federal government, with the announcement of its planned foreign take-over review procedure Tuesday, has in effect decided that the foreign control of large parts of Canadian industry — including most of its high-technology industry — is here to stay.

But the government now hopes to obtain the best deal it can in future developments in foreign control of the country's industry.

And if the "official" version of the Gray report also published Tuesday is any indication, the government also hopes to slowly change the look and complexion of certain portions of the manufacturing industry — in particular the high-technology companies with the most promise of success in export markets.

The foreign take-over review procedure would be only one method of accomplishing this change in Canadian industry.

The Gray study argues in favor of greater "rationalization" of the production of Canadian industry, as well as specialization in certain areas of technology.

At present, Canada in a simple sense has two types of companies: the "branch plant" company and the "rationalized" company.

The branch plant is dominant. The companies tend to be "miniature replicas" of foreign parent companies, turning out whole product lines on a smaller scale for the Canadian market.

The "rationalized" company, in contrast, concentrates on developing a limited number of products from start to finish, including exporting them as well as marketing the products domestically.

The Gray background study argues that the rationalized approach provides more benefits to Canada.

And government officials agree that, under the foreign take-over review powers, the federal government will likely try to negotiate with some large multinational firms, for example, to get "written undertakings" that prospective Canadian subsidiaries would be able to develop separate product lines for export as well as domestic production.

The Gray study also suggests that direct federal support could be used as a lever to stimulate the development of more rationalized companies, both Canadian and foreign controlled.

And the study stresses the need for a precise industrial strategy to ensure that activities under the foreign take-over review and government support of industries would in fact result in the most benefits to Canadians over the long-term.

The government has decided more specifically that it will bargain for the locating of more research and development activities and innovative activities in Canada by some prospective foreign parents of companies in Canada, as part of its efforts to increase the benefits to Canadians from foreign investment.

The Gray study suggests that a "review agency" might be given authorization to bargain for the importation of foreign technology through a firm's length licensing agreements or joint ventures, rather than direct investment. This is based on the fact that Canada depends to a very large extent on imported technology.

And with this latter fact in mind, the study suggests that Canada should develop a strong capability in buying technology and should consider reducing patent protection, which at present protects mostly foreign patent holders,

Montreal Sewage Pollution 'Degradation on Grand Scale'

MONTREAL (CP) — Anti-pollution efforts in Montreal must be increased "in a much more expeditious and effective way," Environment Minister Jack Davis said Wednesday.

Mr. Davis told 600 delegates to a national anti-pollution conference of La Federation des Associations Canadiennes de l'Environnement that "we have a big problem in Montreal" where all but 5.4 per cent of waste water goes into the St. Lawrence River as raw sewage.

This creates problems not only for Montrealers but also

"for tens of thousands of Quebecers living downstream."

"It is a problem for fishermen at Riviere-du-Loup. It is a problem for resort owners as far away as Baie Comeau and Matane."

"Big city dwellers are trying to cut corners. They are trying to minimize their costs. But they are doing this at someone else's expense."

"It is not only bad manners but it is degradation on a grand scale."

PROUD OF PROGRAMS

The federal government had worked with provincial and municipal administrations in other provinces "and we can point with pride to regional programs being carried out on a very large scale indeed."

"Now it is Quebec's turn," he said, adding that he hopes real progress will result from current discussions with the Quebec government.

More direct criticism came from Claude Dagenais, chief chemist for Chem-Spec, a private water-testing firm in suburban Laval.

He scoffed at a claim by Victor Goldblum, Quebec environment minister, that there is still time to save the St. Lawrence.

Mr. Dagenais also questioned the technical ability of municipal employees to collect and analyse drinking water, and the lack of a 24-hour limit on water testing.

"When you start talking about saving a body of water," he said, "it must be very bad."

"The big question is when do you start saving it?"

Times News Services

S A I G O N — President Nguyen Van Thieu today flew to the threatened city of Hue for urgent talks with his military commanders on the situation in the North. He smiled and expressed confidence despite the shattering defeats in Quang Tri, 32 miles to the north.

Hue itself was returning from the near-anarchy of Wednesday to a semblance of normality. South Vietnamese troops who had fled southward from Hue along Highway 1 streamed back today on orders of their new commander, Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, who directed they return to Hue or be shot on the spot.

President Thieu, in a move to maintain civil order in South Vietnam cities and towns during the North Vietnamese offensive, ordered police to "shoot on the spot" anyone engaging in terrorism or public disturbances.

The battlefields were relatively quiet today although Communist forces have moved in on Hue and were reported 18 miles northwest of the old Anamite capital, six miles to the west and 10 miles to the southwest. The major threat was from the northwest where they had tanks and new hand-launched anti-aircraft missiles.

ACTIVE IN AIR

The air war showed no signs of slackening and figures released today showed the Americans were averaging more than 100 strikes in North Vietnam per day and about 600 in the south by fighter-bombers. B-52s were also heavily bombing areas around Quang Tri and Kon Tum in the central highlands.

In Washington, the Nixon administration briefly broke silence on its secret diplomacy in the Vietnamese war and vigorously denied that the United States has proposed a "seven-day" truce in the fighting.

The slowness displayed by the Nixon administration in disavowing the reported seven-day "truce" offer, immediately after its publication by the Paris newspaper, France-Soir, represented anxiety to head off the implication that the United States believes that the military position and morale of South Vietnamese forces are crumbling, officials conceded.

gical tides" to explain the phenomenon. The body is a microcosm comprising essentially the same elements and in similar proportions as the earth's surface—approximately 80 per cent water and 20 per cent minerals," he said.

"I feel that eventually we are going to show that any organism, human or animal, is an integral part of the universe and responds to changes like variations in the solar cycle and the lunar forces are crumpling, officials conceded.

Moon Calls Tune In Miami Murders

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Outbreaks of murder may be touched off by the moon tugging on "biological tides" inside the human body, a team of psychiatric researchers has found.

Dr. Arnold Lieber, a senior resident in psychiatry at the University of Miami's medical school, said Wednesday a two-year study had established a "scientifically-sound relationship" between phases of the moon and the murder rate in Dade County.

Lieber said a chart of Miami area homicides during the last 15 years plotted according to moon phases looks remarkably like a chart of ocean tides.

Using computer programs, Lieber and Dr. Carolyn Sherin of the University of Miami, analyzed nearly 1,900 murders that occurred between 1956 and 1970.

The date revealed that the county's murder rate began to rise about 24 hours before the full moon, reached a peak at full moon, then dropped back before climbing again to a secondary peak at the new moon.

INSTABILITY SHOWS

While the effect of the moon's gravitational pull on humans is small, Lieber said it may be enough to touch off emotional instability in "borderline" cases. This instability is reflected in the murder rate, which he terms a reliable measure of its effect on the general population.

Lieber said the makeup of the body itself helped him turn to the concept of "biolog-

'Tomb of Mud'

Accused Walk Out

QUEBEC (CP) — Leaders of last month's Quebec public service strike walked out of a courtroom where they were to be tried for contempt of court Thursday. They said authorities could arrest them if they want to proceed with the trial.

KELLOGG, Idaho (AP) — Rescue teams struggled nearly a mile underground today trying to reach 53 miners still unheared from three days after smoke began swirling through the Sunshine mine. Mine officials held out hope they would find survivors because air being forced into the shafts apparently was being consumed below through an air pipe system.

The government of British Columbia is wasting at least 75 per cent of the money it earmarks to combat drug abuse.

This is an accusation that has been made by many individuals intimately concerned with illegal narcotics.

Perhaps most importantly, that accusation has been made by the junks themselves; by young people on the fringes of the drug scene and hard-core addicts alike.

And it has been made by others. It has been made by people in what we might call the establishment—the establishment aimed at finding a solution to the scourge of drug abuse.

In one way or another, the accusation has been made by each of the three people—perhaps the only three people—who really know about addicts in Victoria and are passionately dedicated to doing something about the problem.

Those people are Dr. Jack Patterson, director of the Damien Society, which is currently working on the rehabilitation of 88 addicts in Victoria; Dr. James Laing, director of NARC (Narcotic Addiction Rehabilitation Centre) and Staff Sgt. William Chisholm, of the Saanich Police Department.

The accusation has also been made by police undercover agents, the junks, who will have to remain nameless for reasons explained earlier in the series.

The financial drive against drug abuse in B.C. comes from the proceeds—that means the interest—on a $25,000,000 fund. The proceeds amount to about $1.75 million yearly. Seventy-five per cent of that amount is spent on television, radio and newspaper ads.

Don't Distort Trade, Says U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP)

—The U.S. treasury department issued a formal caution today that it expects "normal trade patterns" will not be distorted by Canada's negotiations with foreign investors under proposed new Canadian legislation to screen business takeovers. (More Gray report stories on Page 45.)

The brief anonymous statement distributed by the treasury press office said the U.S. government "appreciates the legitimate interest of the Canadian government in the activities of all industries, foreign and domestic, in Canada."

"At the same time, we would hope and expect that any Canadian negotiations with foreign investors would not produce results which would have the effect of distorting normal trade patterns."

It was the first substantial official comment from U.S. government sources since Revenue Minister Herb Gray tabled his report and proposed legislation in the Commons Tuesday.

Most government departments here had declined any official comment earlier, although numerous officials discussed the legislation on a personal or unattributed basis.

Treasury's publicly voiced concern appeared to be the same as that put forward privately by several government officials Wednesday—that Canada would use its new legislation to seek unusual advantages in export promotion.

WANT BENEFITS

The proposed legislation establishes that a foreign takeover of a Canadian business will not be approved unless it promises "significant benefit" to Canada. The bill provides for negotiations between a foreign firm and the Canadian department of industry, trade and commerce to agree on terms which would assure sufficient benefits to the Canadian economy.

Although the bill itself does not specifically mention export promotion as an area in which the foreign firm could make proposals that would gain approval for the takeover, this was supposed to U.S. government officials by the Canadian embassy here.

The reference particularly caught the eye of treasury officials who have been pressing for measures to reduce the current U.S. deficit in trade with Canada.

SAIGON, Chile (Reuter) — Canada proposed Wednesday night that the developed nations of the world step up their multilateral aid to the developing nations by one-third.

The Canadian proposal, presented at a committee session of the third United Nations conference on trade and development there, was apparently backed by most of the developed nations.

The proposals called on them to increase the annual flow of total multilateral aid from the current level of $1.5 billion to $2 billion.

Greenpeace Donations Sought

DUNCAN — Kurt Horn, Vancouver Island representative for the Greenpeace Foundation, is trying to raise enough money to send another ship from New Zealand to the South Pacific to protest the French nuclear atmospheric test next month.

Greenpeace 3, a 34-foot sloop with Ben Metcalfe of Vancouver aboard, is already on its way to the proposed blast site in Mururoa, in the Society Islands 2,000 miles east northeast of New Zealand.

Horn said Wednesday the foundation would like to raise enough money to send as many ships as they can "to harass the French and give them a difficult time at the blast site."

Horn said "there is no way they can conduct the test with boats in the area unless they want to kill all the men aboard."

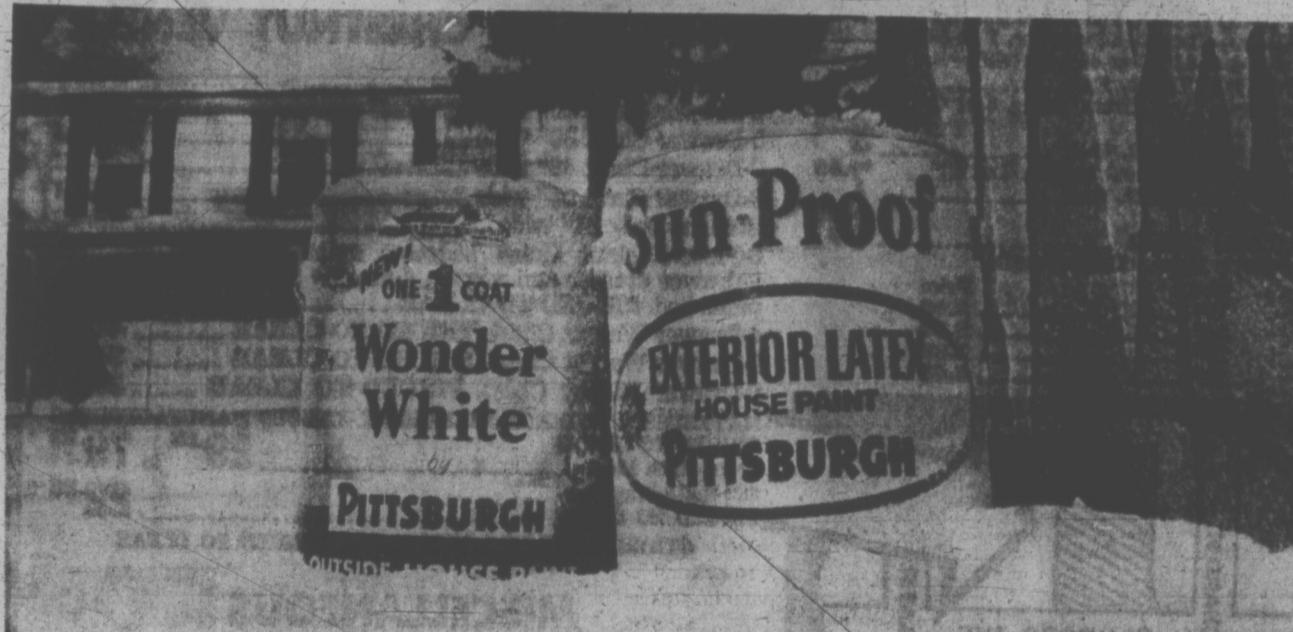

Horn, former president of the Cowichan-Malahat SPEC branch who quit the group six months ago because he felt the battle was futile and "mankind is doomed" said his return to the battle doesn't indicate a change in outlook "but I have always felt there would be some survivors."

Horn said "if the nations of the world continue this insanity like the French nuclear testing there will be no survivors."

As well as chartering as many boats as possible, the Greenpeace Foundation is sending a six-man delegation at the end of May to Paris and Stockholm (where the United Nations environmental conference is being held) to protest the proposed blast.

Donations can be sent to the Greenpeace Foundation, Duncan.

Health Unit Fights Dump

NORTH COWICHAN — The Central Vancouver Island Health unit has joined the protest against Doman Industries Ltd.'s proposal to dump hog fuel on 80 acres adjoining Somenos Lake north of Duncan.

Doman's has applied to the Pollution Control Board for permission to raise its property, which is flooded most of the year, to use for industrial purposes.

In a letter to North Cowichan council Wednesday, director of the health unit, Dr. P. J. Reynolds said: "We think that leaching is inevitable from a dump of this magnitude. The liquid which does leach out from similar dumps is of two kinds, both of them objectionable," and damaging to the environment.

"One will take oxygen from the lake water and has an unpleasant smell and the other spreads a black, oily film."

Reynolds said hog fuel disposal should be on dry, stony ground and not in marshy areas.

Council has received 26 protest letters.

Cowichan-Malahat M.L.A. Robert Strachan said Wednesday the indiscriminate dumping of hog fuel on Vancouver Island must stop.

He recommended the construction of steam-producing plants to utilize the sawmill waste product.

Times News Services

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu today flew to the threatened city of Hue for urgent talks with his military commanders on the situation in the North. He smiled and expressed confidence despite the shattering defeats in Quang Tri, 32 miles to the north.

Hue itself was returning from the near-anarchy of Wednesday to a semblance of normality. South Vietnamese troops who had fled southward from Hue along Highway 1 streamed back today on orders of their new commander, Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, who directed they return to Hue or be shot on sight.

President Thieu, in a move to maintain civil order in South Vietnam's cities and towns during the North Vietnamese offensive, ordered police to "shoot on the spot" anyone engaging in terrorism or public disturbances.

The battlefields were relatively quiet today although Communist forces have moved in on Hue and were reported 18 miles northwest of the old Anamite capital, six miles to the west and 10 miles to the southwest. The major threat was from the northwest where they had tanks and new hand-launched anti-aircraft missiles.

ACTIVE IN AIR

The air war showed no signs of slackening and figures released today showed the Americans were averaging more than 100 strikes in North Vietnam per day and about 600 in the south by fighter-bombers. B-52s were also heavily bombing areas around Quang Tri and Kon Tum in the central highlands.

In Washington, the Nixon administration briefly broke silence on its secret diplomacy in the Vietnamese war and vigorously denied that the United States has proposed a "seven-day" truce in the fighting.

The alacrity displayed by the Nixon administration in disavowing the reported seven-day "truce" offer, immediately after its publication by the Paris newspaper, France-Soir, represented anxiety to head off the implication that the United States believes that the military position and morale of South Vietnam's forces are crumbling, officials conceded.

USAF SECRET MAPS WRAP FURNITURE

LONDON (AP) — The British defence ministry ordered an investigation Wednesday to determine how secret United States Air Force maps came to be used as wrapping paper by a London furniture company.

A defence ministry spokesman said the maps came from Germany but he had no idea how.

They were first discovered and brought to the attention of British authorities by a Birmingham customer of the London company.

"There are still more inquiries to be made in Germany, from where they would appear to have come," the spokesman said. "They are stamped 'Restricted, USAF. For official use only,'" he added.

Moon Calls Tune In Miami Murders

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Outbreaks of murder may be touched off by the moon tugging on "biological tides" inside the human body, a team of psychiatric researchers has found.

Dr. Arnold Lieber, a senior resident in psychiatry at the University of Miami's medical school, said Wednesday a two-year study had established a "scientifically-sound relationship" between phases of the moon and the murder rate in Dade County.

Lieber said a chart of Miami area homicides during the last 15 years plotted according to moon phases looks remarkably like a chart of ocean tides.

Using computer programs, Lieber and Dr. Carolyn Sherin of the University of Miami, analysed nearly 1,300 murders that occurred between 1956 and 1970.

The date revealed that the county's murder rate began to rise about 24 hours before the full moon, reached a peak at full moon, then dropped back before climbing again to a secondary peak at the new moon.

INSTABILITY SHOWS

While the effect of the moon's gravitational pull on humans is small, Lieber said it may be enough to touch off emotional instability in "borderline" cases. This instability is reflected in the murder rate, which he terms a reliable measure of its effect on the general population.

Lieber said the makeup of the body itself helped him turn to the concept of "biological tides" to explain the phenomenon. The body is a microcosm comprising essentially the same elements and in similar proportions as the earth's surface—approximately 80 per cent water and 20 per cent minerals," he said.

"I feel that eventually we are going to show that any organism, human or animal, is an integral part of the universe and responds to changes like variations in the solar cycle and the lunar cycle."

The alacrity displayed by the Nixon administration in disavowing the reported seven-day "truce" offer, immediately after its publication by the Paris newspaper, France-Soir, represented anxiety to head off the implication that the United States believes that the military position and morale of South Vietnam's forces are crumbling, officials conceded.

The proposals called on them to increase the annual flow of total multilateral aid from the current level of $1.5 billion to $2 billion.

What do the people who are in the know, that is the addicts, the two doctors, the police officer and the nameless undercover agents, say about this method of attack?

An addict: "They are really bummers.

They are stupid. They don't say nothing about nothing. They are written by people who don't know where it's at for people who don't know where it's at, either."

Another addict: "For anyone, for any young person, who knows anything about drugs they are a big laugh, they are a waste. They show that those dudes (the politicians) don't know anything about drugs and I don't think they care anything about drugs, anyway."

Dr. Jack Patterson: "I think the government's approach does more harm than good because it is so far away from anything meaningful. Anyone who knows anything about drugs or addicts knows that the money is spent on television, radio and newspaper ads.

IN ONE WAY OR ANOTHER, THE ACCUSATION HAS

been made by each of the three people — perhaps the only three people — who really know about addicts in Victoria and are passionately dedicated to doing something about the problem.

Those people are Dr. Jack Patterson, director of the Damien Society, which is currently working on the rehabilitation of 88 addicts in Victoria; Dr. James Laing, director of NARC (Narcotic Addiction Rehabilitation Centre) and Staff Sgt. William Chisholm, of the Saanich Police Department.

The accusation has also been made by police undercover agents, the narcs, who will have to remain nameless for reasons explained earlier in the series.

The financial drive against drug abuse in B.C. comes from the proceeds — that means the interest — on a $25,000,000 fund. The proceeds amount to about $1.75 million yearly. Seventy-five per cent of that amount is spent on television, radio and newspaper ads.

Merchants Fear Barrow Barrage To Hurt Image

Bastion Square merchants complained today that the square's "image" will be ruined if students are allowed to set up barrows there selling their handicrafts.

Aldermen's sympathies seemed to be about equally divided between the merchant and the students, but finally the committee decided to ask Ald. Clyde Savage, whose responsibility is tourism, to try to find an alternative city site for the young entrepreneurs.

Doris Bernard, of 3136 Jackson, on behalf of the 17 high school students, said they had operated "flea market" stalls last summer in Market Street, but the businesses which sponsored them had withdrawn their support this year.

The youngsters hoped to sell their wares from rented barrows in Bastion Square, because "most of them have nothing else to do — that's what it amounts to," Mrs. Bernard said.

"They're nice kids but there are just no jobs available. Everyone seems to think this is a great idea but no one seems prepared to help."

A letter to the committee, signed by several merchants of the Village Fair complex of shops in Bastion Square, warned that unless a firm policy was followed the square would be "overrun with barrows . . . causing confusion and diversion from private enterprise businesses inside, for those of us who pay business and ales taxes.

"We wish to preserve the image of Bastion Square, where every effort has been made to maintain a dignified atmosphere. This atmosphere represents five years, on a year-round basis, against an occasional summer tourist-oriented invasion."

Parks committee chairman Ald. Ove Witt said while his sympathies were with the young people, he was afraid that issuing a permit in this instance might lead to a flood of similar requests.

He said from the merchants' point of view, having to "sweat it out" for nine slack months of the year and then face competition from peddlars in the summer months is "really a disaster."

Witt said he knew that a request for a street "flower cart business" was imminent, and expressed concern at the possible growth of this type of business activity.

Mayor Peter Pollen, however, didn't consider this would be any real problem, provided some discretion were used.

SECOND EATON'S PLANNED BY '75

Eaton's is planning a second store for the Victoria area with construction likely to start by 1975.

The suburban store, to be about two-thirds the size of the one downtown, is part of a new expansion program of the T. Eaton Company, Victoria manager Reg Hind said.

There are seven new Eaton stores either under construction or ready to begin construction across Canada and an additional nine more — including the new Victoria retail outlet — are in the planning stage.

No decision has been announced on a site. However, The Bay has already announced it will begin construction next year on a store in the Broadmead subdivision planned for the Royal Oak and the location seems to fit the needs of Eaton's as well.

"Wherever we decide to build, it will be a second store," Hind said. "We will not desert downtown Victoria."

Outlook 'Promising'

For New Hospital

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

MLA Herb Bruch predicted today plans for a 225-bed hospital at Helmcken and the Trans-Canada Highway could be on the drawing boards in a few weeks if the regional hospital board approves the project.

The hospital would be for so-called extended care patients, mostly elderly chronically ill people who require nursing around the clock.

The Juan de Fuca Hospital Society recently offered Health Minister Ralph Loffmark a "package proposal" to develop and operate the hospital. A letter from Loffmark to the regional hospital board this week indicates support.

Bruch said Loffmark has assured him he will do everything he can to speed the project.

PROMISING'
Art Young, regional hospital board chairman, confirmed a letter from Loffmark on the hospital proposal has been received and it looks "promising."

He declined further comment until the matter has been considered by the regional board executive.

The 34-acre site proposed will cost an estimated $221,000 if the purchase goes ahead and the hospital itself about $2.25 million.

Bruch said it might take about a year and a half to build. It would see completion of plans to add 600 hospital beds in Greater Victoria for extended care patients with funds provided partly by referendum four years ago.

The regional hospital board, in consultation with the province, had proposed purchase of the site last year but Loffmark thought the price of $6,500 an acre too high.

DONATED

There are indications the sisters operating St. Mary's Priory will donate $1,500 an acre to a maximum of $51,000 toward the land purchase price and this could be what has led Loffmark to look with more favor on the project recently.

The program for extended care beds has 300 near completion alongside Gorge Road rehabilitation hospital. They had been scheduled to be available for patients this summer but the current construction lockout has stopped work about two months short of completion.

Another 75 beds are to be built in the first phase of a new hospital in Central Saanich but this is still mired in paperwork.

Zig-Zag Saga Zaps Our Man At the Helm

For 10 terrifying minutes the fate of the cream of Victoria's society was in my hands Wednesday afternoon.

I was at the helm of the CPR's Princess Patricia during the annual pre-season cruise for mayors, aldermen, merchants and provincial dignitaries.

It was 10 of the longest and busiest minutes of my life. My performance was nothing to write home about but at least I didn't bump into The Empress.

It began when I went up top to chat with Capt. Pendry Harris in the wheelhouse. On impulse I asked if I might drive. The captain hesitated a moment.

"Why not?" he finally said.

In his 30 years afloat he had endured just about everything.

He pointed to the compass which registered at 130.

"Just hold it to that course."

But the 6,000-ton ship had a will of her own. She started drifting.

"To port. Quickly. Turn to port." "Right," I said. Then paused. "Uh, which way is that?"

It was hard work.

"My guess," the captain said, observing my arm action, "is that you might last about 20 minutes as a helmsman."

My own estimate was that I would last about three minutes.

Every time I swung the wheel to get her back on course she went too far the other way. To steer successfully you have to keep moving and in effect steer two minutes ahead of the ship.

I couldn't hold the course at 120.

"Let's try at 120 then," the captain said.

I spun the wheel again and finally brought her into what passed for a steady course.

Translated that means we did not go aground. We did not run anybody down.

I checked the wake. A beautiful zig-zag pattern.

"Very good," the captain said kindly.

When I relinquished the wheel I had a smart salute for first mate Raymond Hudson and the rest of the crew. It was then I discovered my arm was sore.

Helmans must be a rugged breed.

Downstairs the guests were being treated to a sumptuous feast and an address of welcome by Harry Tyson, CPR manager of marine operations in Vancouver.

The cruise was supposed to be on the Princess Marguerite, he explained, but it is undergoing last-minute check in preparation for the season's first run up from Seattle on Friday. The Marguerite's car space has been expanded from 52 to 100 and more seats and dining space have been added.

The Patricia, meanwhile, is ready to begin cruises to Alaska from Vancouver.

The guests had high praise for the cooks, the captain and the helmsman, although some remarked that the Patricia did seem to be drifting a bit for 10 minutes of the journey.

Drifting? From the wheelhouse it felt like I was wandering all over the Pacific Ocean.

Billboards Still Boost Tobacco

Billboards advertising tobacco products are still in evidence in Victoria, despite Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's directive Monday that they should be taken down.

Most of the signs are on billboards of Seaboard Advertising Co. Ltd., of whom Peterson requested an end to the advertising Monday. He said then Seaboard has been the main company continuing advertising of tobacco products since the government banned it in 1971.

A quick check of the downtown area today revealed at least six tobacco billboards.

"Craven A" tobacco was advertised on boards at the 700-block Broughton, Pandora and Quadra, and on Bay St. at both Rock Bay Ave. and Turner.

A "Player's" sign is on a wall at Chatham and Douglas and there is a large sign advertising "Du Maurier" atop a building at Douglas and Bay.

At three different locations, signs appear to have been recently converted from tobacco advertising to requests for aid for the Easter seal campaign.

The signs resembled the cover of a "Macdonald's Export" cigarette package, green in color with the familiar face of a woman in a circle in the centre.

These signs carry the message: Have you checked a crippled child? Easter seals.

From Vancouver, Seaboard president J. M. Finlayson said his firm "is seeking the advice of our solicitor" before taking any action on the billboards.

Peterson, in his Monday request, did not specify a time period after which billboard advertisers of tobacco products will be prosecuted but said his office would carry out enforcement proceedings if the warning is not heeded.

The warning is not heeded.

Anderson: Just What the Doctor Ordered

A COUPLE OF WEEKS ago, I suggested that British Columbia Liberals couldn't do better than choose Victoria's trenchant David Anderson to lead their party wing. Having shot that arrow in the air, I more or less forgot about it until Wednesday, when the present MP for Esquimalt-Saanich made it known that he would seek the provincial Grit chieftancy.

I also offered my opinion that B.C. voters could do much worse than seat Anderson in the premier's chair when it comes up for grabs.

That, of course, isn't going to happen overnight. When polling-time rolls round again, Bennett is likely to demonstrate that he remains what he has been in earlier joustings — a political shoo-in. (If he runs, that is. And run he must, or pop goes the Soared weasel!)

Still and all, and assuming that David Anderson will move unimpeded to B.C. Liberal leadership, our next provincial election should be a mighty interesting one.

The vigorous presence of Anderson in Greater Victoria contention would certainly help make it so.

As a federal member, he has refused to settle for the backbencher's role in traditional chieftainship in Parliament. Quite otherwise, in fact.

Anderson has proved himself to be a hard-nose capable of independent action, and if he has displeased Liberal brass by his oil transport fight, he has won strong approval here at home.

He has a lot going for him. But as a powerful Liberal candidate for a Vancouver Island riding, he could expect a Soared zeroing-in of the sort which attended that party's massive if not too fortunate burst to secure Oak Bay.

Projecting farther, and for the moment disregarding the notorious uncertainties that attend elections, Anderson as house captain of the Liberal bloc might well have a tonic effect on that embattled little garrison.

In the few years since he burst upon the political scene, he has shown himself to be durable, resourceful and gutsy. To a minor opposition that has stubbornly maintained its place between eclipse and extinction these many years, Anderson could be precisely what the doctor ordered.

The last two B.C. Liberal house leaders — and no shame to men who gave their best — were condemned to the forerunner role ascribed in Holy Writ to John the Baptist.

They preached in the wil-

My impression is that some of these were waited to legislative seats almost in spite of themselves.

epic on radio time has so far provided more comedy than inspiration. The Columbia deal, so new and shiny when it rolled off the line, is showing a hint of rust on its bumpers.

In an aging government, the trend from persuasion to compulsion has become noticeable.

The electoral climate of this province doesn't yet strike me as right for a political upheaval, much as I would welcome one. But if anyone can achieve a drastic increase in Liberal legislative strength, I think David Anderson is the man to do it.

Q. Can you tell me how many miles of railroad track were built in Canada in the last 25 years, by CNR, CPR, or others? — W.M.

A. The Canada Year Book lists the track built in this period as being the 250 miles extension of British Columbia's Pacific Great Eastern Railway from Fort St. John to Fort Nelson and the CNR-operated 230-mile Alberta Resources Railway west of Edmonton. The new construction, however, has been largely offset by abandonment of unprofitable lines.

I checked the wake. A beautiful zig-zag pattern.
